

Seen and Heard . . .

By Jerome English

A PORTRAIT PAINTER . . . Mrs. Fay Hoffman Church honored by her Alpha Chi Omega sorority sisters Tuesday when she was here for the opening of her exhibit at the Elfstrom galleries. . . . Mrs. Church, interesting person to meet and talk with, has only been in Oregon for a year, having come west from Boston. . . . There was a steady stream of art lovers trailing all afternoon and viewing the lovely portraits. . . . Mrs. Church greeted guests in a pebble sand two piece linen dress with red and green stripe trim and red straw hat with matching feathers. . . . her flowers were red carnations and stephanotis. . . . Punch was served in the party room adjacent to the galleries. . . . a white organdy cloth and lovely calla lilies formed the centerpiece. . . . Mrs. William L. Phillips, pouring punch was chic in a sand beige tulle with turquoise straw hat and blouse. . . . Mrs. Phillips has our congratulations for completing her first college year at Willamette. . . . her first semester grades for all A's and no doubt she will come through with honors again. . . . Several women came down from Lake Oswego with Mrs. Church. . . . Mrs. Curtis Stewart, who has visited her sister, Mrs. James Mott, in a brown dress with white straw hat. . . . Mrs. Andrew McCann in a pretty print frock with gold and straw hat and flower trim. . . . Mrs. G. F. Chambers and sister, Miss Dorathia Steusloff, who arranged the affair wearing summer frocks. . . . the former's a white and black silk print and black straw hat and the latter wearing red linen and matching shoes. . . . Mrs. James Walton in a cool looking striped cotton and perky white Dutch bonnet. . . .

A GARDEN WEDDING . . . Guests reminiscing over beauty of setting at Everett-Vieskos' home last Sunday at country home of the Fred Vieskos when their only daughter, Betty, became Leon Everett's bride. . . . cars parked all along the highway. . . . many guests coming from a long distance. . . . The bridal entourage coming from the front porch and walking down the sloping lawn to the altar through a bridal aisle marked with white posts and satin ribbon. . . . the altar against a natural background greenery. . . . all white glads and stocks, the bouquets. . . . and to the flight a pretty pool with water lilies. . . . Sweet music note. . . . birds flying low and singing during the ceremony. . . .

Breath-taking. . . . the bridesmaids as they made their first appearance from the house. . . . three pretty brunette girls, all with early summer tans, wearing chartreuse and lime green frocks, simply designed but becoming to all. . . . and carrying striking bouquets of purple iris and stock and matching flowered hats. . . . little Steve Crane in white as ring bearer and Sally Beth Jones in yellow, strewing flowers before the bride. . . . and Betty so blonde and attractive on the arm of her father. . . .

No rain drops. . . . It wasn't until the newlyweds were receiving guests on the patio that it started to really rain. . . . then a scurry of guests to the house. . . . the gorgeous tiered cake and coffee tables, rushed under shelter. . . . overcast skies all day and rain in the morning kept the Vieskos in suspense until the wedding. . . . but even the rain failed to dampen spirits of bridal party. . . . the bride and groom dashing from patio to house and receiving best wishes everywhere. . . . Betty and Leon so calm and all smiles when their pictures were taken in the rain. . . .

Flowers in abundance. . . . all white snapdragons, delphinium and glads on the fireplace and serving tables. . . . pastel flowers inside. . . . a new recreation house just off the patio, the walls of knotty pine. . . . gorgeous roses in bloom in the garden. . . . in between showers guests viewing the lovely gifts on the sun porch. . . .

In pretty formal. . . . a dozen or more young friends of the bride assisting and making colorful background during the ceremony as they watched from the patio. . . . two cousins of the bride. . . . Patricia Viesko lovely in a white frock with rows of narrow black lace and her blonde hair braided. . . . and sister, Barbara, in a royal blue and white striped gown. . . . newly engaged Civilla Reeber in pink. . . . Marie Ann Newman in blue with a bustle. . . . Others noted. . . .
