Harry James Turns Lover in Elsinore's 'Do You Love Me'

Harry James, maestro of one of America's most popular swing bands, turns lover for the first time on the screen in 20th Century-Fox's gay technicolor musical, "Do You Love Me," now playing at the Elsinore theatre. And to quote the Russian director, Gregory Ratoff, "he is but sensational."

In a romantic role which makes him an integral part of the story beyond the familiar duties of leading his band and playing the world's hottest, sweetest trumpet, Harry vies with crooner Dick Haymes for the heart of beautiful Maureen O'Hara. He appears in 86 scenes with 243 lines of dialogue and, although James has never had any dramatic training, he denied any nervousness in handling the assignment. "I was particularly fortunate in having Ratoff direct me, for he not only has had enough experience as an actor himself to train me in what he wanted, but he has an unusually keen sense of humor that made me feel perfectly at ease working with him." When asked if that held for his love scenes with Maureen, he quipped, "Sure, why not? Maureen's a seasoned trouper, and besides the script didn't call for any torrid love scenes. Even if it had I'd have done all right." "After all, who couldn't make love to Maureen O'Hara?"

Vets, Families to Occupy Colony Tuesday; Applications Show Tribulations of Returning GIs

City Editor, The Statesman

Final inspection of 24 newly completed apartments at the veterans housing colony on South 16th street will be made Monday by a representative from the federal public housing authority, Housing Manager Joe H. Hopkins said Saturday, and "moving day" is expected to become an actuality Tuesday for 24 local families—the first accommodated at the site from a list of approximately 400 applicants.

Among the families who will live there is at least one separated since the young veteran husband and father returned to his employment in Salem. The wife and their two children have been living in a basement apartment in the overcrowded home of other members of the family in another city, and one of the children is not in good health.

Second Brother Due
One young former navy man, his wife and child who have been living with "her people" (a large family) may get into one of the apartments by the time the second brother in the wife's family has come home from the service.

Still another apartment in the court will house a man and wife and their two children, who will be making their home all together for the first time. The adults have been living in a one-room cottage, while the children, ages three years and six months, respectively, have been "boarded out."

An elderly landlady will bless the joint city-federal reconversion project which is taking her renters out of crowded quarters. The 2½-year-old child "annoys" her the younger's parents frankly declared as they applied for living quarters in the veterans' colony, but no other quarters could be found.

Baby Due 'Any Time'
A couple who with their one child now occupy two unconnected rooms in a house where they are provided with no warm water, must share bathroom facilities and are limited to a bath piece a week, will get one of the new apartments, perhaps before the second child is born, although it is "due any time," the application record indicates.

A veteran's mother with two young daughters and one young son will occupy another apartment and share their limited home at the veterans' colony with the grandmother of the family.

Despite difficulties, many of the veterans who have applied are already dividing their small living quarters. Sometimes they have with their own families the widow of a friend, the wife of a buddy still in the service, a sister or a wife's sister. One family of four adults, one of whom is to have a child soon, may move from two rooms over a garage into a slightly roomier veterans' colony apartment.

Apartments Vary
The apartments vary somewhat to accommodate different sized families. But they have certain things in common. The lattices over the doorways suggest red roses, and the leveled ground and great oak trees around them suggest green lawns. "We're putting in a lawn no matter what the project may eventually provide," declares Mrs. Joe Hopkins, first veteran's wife to reside in the colony. Her husband is manager there, and she handles much of the details of bookkeeping and information service at a desk and a telephone extension in her apartment while her two small children play where she can watch them.

Cleanliness, fresh paint, smart distribution of furniture and colorful, useful articles in the Hopkins home offer encouragement to the incoming young wife who may see the small apartments as not much better than the crowded place she is leaving. Kitchen, dining and living room are to all intents and purposes one room, but Mr. and Mrs. Hopkins have used a bookshelf to indicate a dividing line and to hide the kitchen range from view of anyone sitting in the "parlor."

2 Bedrooms in Some
Two bedrooms and a bath, however, will look like luxury to many a family.

One applicant, whose need was judged sufficient to guarantee him and his family a place in the colony (the judging is done by a committee of high calibre men who would be nagged to death if their names were published) has responded that he is not interested. He has seen the apartments and finds them "too small."

A number of the 172 family dwelling units in the colony will go to married veterans attending or planning to attend Willamette university. With the exception of this group, other applicants all appear to be earning fair salaries or wages, and the problem with them is not one of financing living quarters but of finding them. Rent is reasonable, and furniture of a standard type is available through the federal agency which has provided the city with the little houses. Plain, western-style wooden furniture and a limited choice of kitchen furnishings is provided, with rental according to the amount used.

Thousands of acres of petrified prehistoric trees lie strewn over the ground in the famous Petrified Forest of northeastern Arizona. Some of these marble-hard logs are 250 feet long.

Myrna Loy and Don Ameche are co-starred in "So Goes My Love," a Jack H. Skirball-Bruce Manning production based upon "Genius in the Family" by Hiram Percy Maxim and hailed by audiences as one of the year's most entertaining human comedies. It is a Universal release and now showing at the Grand.

Myrna Loy, Don Ameche Share Honors in Grand Theatre Film

Few pictures since "Going My Way" carry the heart-warming appeal of "So Goes My Love," now playing at the Grand theatre. The new film, most recent of the Jack H. Skirball-Bruce Manning productions, is a Universal release.

It's the story of Hiram Maxim, famed inventor, but instead of dealing with the devices he created, it tells a warmly human story of a man and woman who meet by accident, fall in love, get married and have children. The screenplay, by Manning and James Clifden, is based upon the Maxim book "Genius in the Family."

Myrna Loy and Don Ameche are co-starred for the first time in this fine film. Miss Loy, who devoted most of the war years to Red Cross work, is back on the screen and she really clicks with an adult performance worthy of Academy consideration. Ameche again proves that he can play practically anything thrown in his lap.

Included in the supporting cast are Rhys Williams and Bobby Driscoll, the eight-year-old mop-top starred in Walt Disney's "Uncle Remus." Richard Gaines has an outstanding role.

Whist is the ancestor of bridge. The Pasteur experiments began in 1856.

Ingrid Bergman who co-stars with Gary Cooper in Warner's "Saratoga Trunk." Starts today at Warners' Capitol theatre.

14-Year-Old Faces Double Murder Count

OROVILLE, Calif., July 20 (AP) — In a tense courtroom appearance, punctuated by shrill feminine outcries, 14-year-old Albert Jones was arraigned in a justice court at Chico yesterday on double charge of murder.

Albert is accused of strangling to death in a fit of pique Patricia Ann Crandall, 14, and fatally wounding Mrs. Myrtle Nielsen, Chico housewife, because he "wanted to drive their car." Two additional charges of assault and one of attempted murder were also preferred.

Three women made a noisy scene as the boy was being hurried out. Mrs. Ben Crandall, mother of Patricia Ann, stepped forward directly into the boy's path, and in a tense voice demanded: "Why did you kill Pat?" Albert dropped his eyes and hesitated. Before he could answer a second woman's voice shrilled out: "Don't ask him that! He's a murderer and a liar!" Instantly Albert's mother, Mrs. Arla Jones, leaped forward and struck at the second woman, Mrs. W. T. Banta, owner of the tourist court where the Crandalls live. "You lie!" screamed Mrs. Jones. Deputies seized her and stood between the two women until calm was restored.
