OREGON STATE COLLEGE-Though Oregon is believed to have a better record for farm safety than the national average, farm accidents exact a steady toll from both children and adults in this state as these sample headlines taken from Oregon papers this summer reveal. The Oregon committee to promote the observance of the 1946 National Farm Safety week, headed by Dean and Director William A. Schoenfeld, is pointing out that farming is a hazardous occupation and is urging all members of farm families to be "alert today and alive tomorrow."
