one gent is happy the rains are coming. He would be Ralph Caley, of the Kansas Caleys, the lean restauranteur who this year held the unenviable post that is junior leagues secretary. Ralph will likely get no posies, and certainly no pay for his chores as the leagues' busiest man-that is, none unless he figures stipend enough is found in giving much time, patience and energy to the kids' program.

Caley did everything this summer from recording the league laws to umpiring and coaching, and often enough was a one-man publicity gang for the non-profit ball setup. Like the sponsors who dish up the dough to equip the kids and the men who do the coaching, all for free, Ralph is deserving of a large "thank you" from the community during the war.

Only one more week to go here at home in this actually ferocious Western International league pennant scrap but lo, the attitude of the athletes on the field this year hasn't been at all indicative of the torridness of the race itself. Not one player "rheubarb"fisticuffs, that is-have we seen in the Waters arena. There has been a spot of bottle tossing at the gents who have besmirched the name umpire, and a few of the customers have found a locked gate the only thing between them and a punch on the snoots of those same bandits in blue. But the players themselves, certainly a chummy lot this semester, haven't as much as thrown a flying spike or a hair-

Helser-Holmes Duel Was League's No. 1

Rheubarbs would be nothing new to the Waters fan, for he has but to remember the 1941 season and Southpaw Roy Helser. Big Roy and Bigger Del Holmes of the Tacoma Tiges one evening dished up what amounted to the best brawl in WI history. Holmes threw a 3-0 pitch behind Hitter Helser and Roy charged the huge hurler only to have his nose splattered all over his face when the Tacoma catcher leaped aboard Helser's back just as he reached the waiting Holmes. It was a foul, all right, and Roy got a broken nose because of it. But before the two were finally seperated Helser did manage to conk Holmes on the whiskers with a stout left, same leaving an unwelcome welt on the Holmes profile.

Of all the baseball fisticuffs we've heard of, the Helser-Holmes brawl is the only one in which the gladiators themselves were damaged. Usually it's the innocents who try to break up the melees who take the thumping while the contestants, truly thankful at being held back, swing and curse wildly, but quite undamagingly at the breeze.

Wenatchee Uprising Tough on Christopher

One of the best instances we know of in which the bystander got the bruises came in Wenatchee in '40. Bobby Baer of the townies and Wayne McCue of the Chiefs started a rumpus at home plate. No blows were struck, but players from both benches rushed to the cause just in case. Solon Skipper Bunny Griffiths was spiked in the foot during the milling, but his wound was secondary compared to that of Chief Pitcher Russ Christopher. long since with the Philadelphia A's. Six-foot four-inch Russ, in bounding from the enemy bench, clanked his head on a steel beam, and was later found prone in the dugout with a bloody gash on his noggin and colder than a January clam.
