Byrnes Outlines German Policy

Advance announcement that Secretary Byrnes would make an important address in Germany was fulfilled when the text of his statement was published. Speaking to German officials and American officers of the army of occupation the American secretary of state called for a new Germany which would embrace both the Ruhr and the Rhineland, leaving the Saar to France, but probably including the region east of the Oder provisionally assigned to Poland. He urged the establishment immediately of a provisional, central German government and warned that Germany must not become a pawn in a struggle between the east and the west. The Byrnes statement is to be regarded as a definite outline of policy on behalf of this government. His declaration that American troops would not be withdrawn from Germany but would remain as long as necessary was merely his way of underscoring this policy. It assures the world that our country is not withdrawing from its responsibilities in Europe.

Previous efforts to establish a unified government have failed in considerable degree due to the determination of France to hold onto the Ruhr. Whether the Russians will acquiesce in the establishment of a central German government is also very uncertain. That has not been their attitude in Korea where the excuse for allied occupation is far less than in Germany. The west has a suspicion that Russia is striving to extend its sphere of influence to include its zone of Germany. In this situation there is grave danger that Germany may by clever brokerage emerge with revived power. If the east and the west are set in antagonism against each other the Germans JUSTICE COURT will seek to make the best deal they can with either one as ally. That would be a tragedy: to let nazism develop again in a new contest for power. The time is at hand to arrive at decisions regarding Germany. The bickering at Paris has related to minor issues and to treaties with Italy and the late nazi satellites. The main problem is the future of Germany. Some frame of reorganization should be devised in which a new and democratic Germany may come into being. Secretary Byrnes does well to announce the temper American position, which is reasonable and most hopeful for Germany and the world. Are the other nations willing to move promptly to set up a central government for a reunited Germany? This will be the real test of allied cooperation for the peace of Europe and the world.

Fight for Air Service

If the northwest keeps hacking away perhaps the civil aerona, tes board with increase the airline service allowed this region. The vigorous campaign to get an oriental flight based in the northwest finally bore fruit in the granting of a permit to Northwest Airlines to operate from Seattle to the orient and return via Alaska.

New Portland is enlisting general support over the northwest for a direct air connection with the Hawaiian islands. What may bring it is the prospect of a connection via a British line from Vancouver, B. C. to Honolulu.

It is stated also that the CAB will review the request of Western Airline for permission to fly the San Francisco-Port-land-Seattle route, putting it in competition with United Air-custody of one minor child to lines as it now is (along with TWA) between San Francisco and Los Angeles. Western Air suggests three alternate routes-via Eureka and Coos Bay, via Redding, Medford, Eugene and Salem; and via Klamath Falls "and-or" The Dalles, Portland, Salem thus has an interest in the application as a possible means of augmenting local air service. This would be of special importance as soon as Mexico permits Western Air to start flights already certified by CAB between Los Angeles and Mexico City.

Our chamber of commerce should have committee on air transportation, so it can present Salem's case in these matters.

Piano Still Good

Inventors have been working on musical instruments, adapting to them some of the related discoveries. Thus an electric organ is used as a substitute for the pipe organ. Some new in- ment to take over. . . struments have been invented employing new ideas in the and trusts have been the tools and mechanics of sound. It was to be expected then that the piano would get a going over. However a piano engineer told a convention of plano tuners that not much change would be made in the present plano. The expert. Ralph Sperry of DeKalb, Ill., is quoted as telling the tuners

Minor improvements will be made, of course. Maybe electronics will improve it, but experiments do not indicate it. Perhaps precentatics or electric actions will improve the touch mechanism, but again experiments do not indicate it.

Weil, that's something worth noting-to learn of an instrument that will not be reconverted and remodeled. The piano is a wonderful instrument, though perhaps it has been neglected somewhat in recent years, what with the growth of orchestras. The piano remains the basic musical instrument and it is comforting to know that the old designers and makers of the piano did such a good job that engineers armed with new knowledge and took can't find much room'for improving it.

Telephone Snafu

The pile-up of business has made the local telephone system "snafu" the last week. The dial system couldn't handle the flood of phone calls, and "one to two hours delay" was the call back of central on long distance just to Portland.

People just want to talk too much. Supply of telephone
