

Mr. Taylor Weds in South

From New Orleans comes details of the marriage of Salem man, Winston Howarth Taylor, son of Mr. and Mrs. Milo E. Taylor of Salem, to Miss Betty Frances Terry, daughter of Mrs. Paul Edward Terry of New Orleans, which took place in the southern city on September 9 at the Carrollton Avenue Methodist church. Mrs. Taylor flew south for her son's marriage.

The double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. Elmer C. Gunn, assisted by the Rev. Robert Jamieson, at 8 o'clock. Miss Nellie Mae Gunn was the soloist. William J. Whipple, Jr., of Barre, Mass., gave his cousin in marriage. The bride gown, which was made by her mother, was of white satin and marquisette. The satin bodice was enhanced with a ruffling of fleur-de-lis design and applique to the marquisette. The skirt was in two tiers, the top one edged in satin applique. She wore long white gloves and her three tiered fingertip length veil of tulle was caught to a wreath of orange blossoms. She carried an old-fashioned bouquet of white stephanotis centered with an orchid.

Miss Everett Ross of Enid, Okla., was her sister's matron of honor and wore blue lace. Bridesmaids were Mrs. Eugene L. Brown and Miss Betty Lou Newirth of New Orleans, who wore pink and yellow lace dresses respectively. The dresses, fashioned with peplums, were made sleeveless and worn with long white gloves. Their old-fashioned bouquets were of blue, yellow and pink asters.

George H. Thompson was best man, and ushers were R. Ross Cahal, Jr., and William B. Cox, all of New Orleans. Mrs. Terry wore a yellow embroidered silk dress with blue carnation corsage for her daughter's wedding. Mrs. Taylor attended her son's nuptials in a delect blue crepe gown and corsage of pink and white carnations.

A wedding reception followed the rites at the Terry home. The newlyweds went by plane to Chattanooga on their honeymoon. For going away the bride wore grey garnet suit with black hat and
