Ranch Ramblings

Topic: Wallace Orchards

By Lillie L. Madsen
Fruit farming is far more pleasant, as well as more profitable, if you have the right kind of help. Says Paul Wallace, owner of the Wallace Orchards, situated a few miles north on the Wallace Road in Folk county.

(Pictures of the Wallace place were on The Statesman's farm page Thursday).

Because Mr. Wallace has "blocked" his fruit land so that picking begins in June and continues through the walnut season in late autumn, most of the pickers have a job all summer long. This way, he explains, you can keep better help and the pickers make more money than if they had to change from one place to another. Almost all the pickers on the Wallace farm are neighbors. They pick year after year. If they were once transients, they soon became local.

Methods Changed

Mr. Wallace admits that farming undoubtedly is being done somewhat differently now than when his father, R. S. Wallace, bought the ranch 60 years ago. Wallace Orchards has become famous for its pears. Some of the trees which were planted when the ranch was first established are still bearing well.

"Pear trees will live and bear at least 100 years," Wallace remarked. "They, like other fruit trees, do well, must be given the right care. I go along with the state college on soil improvement and other programs — only in spraying we sometimes differ a little. I still think there is no fungicide as the 330 acres are in pears. There are Bartlets which ripen in August and picking of which goes over into September. The fall pears, to be picked later this month, include Clairgeau, Bosc and Comice.

Cherries Start Season
The sweet cherries, Royal Anne and Waterhouse, start out the season. There are 15 acres of these, followed by 15 acres of sour cherries. Then come 10 acres of Boysenberries which will run into the pear harvest.

By next year there will be some Gravenstein apples. Ten acres of these were planted two years ago. They will be sold on the fresh fruit market, Mr. Wallace says.

Bainard blackberries follow the Boysens, and 20 acres of filberts follow the pear season. Last are 15 acres of walnuts.

"Some years I have had as many as 40 pickers during the season. This year I have only 17, and I believe these have picked as many as the 40 sometimes have. I have very fine help," Mr. Wallace said as he introduced his foreman, Sam Patrick, a graduate of South Dakota university, college of agriculture. He has been at the head of the ranch for two years. He has his own home on the farm, an attractive house within calling distance of the Wallace home.

Several Homes on Ranch
There are four other homes on the ranch, occupied by assistants. Each home has its own water system within the house, with an irrigation system for the lawn and garden. Each tenant has his own

Y Groups Urged As Sponsors for Community Center

SILVERTON—Discussion of advisability of asking the YMCA and YWCA of Silverton to sponsor the proposed recreational center was favorably received by the memorial planning group at its Wednesday night meeting.

This memorial group was organized a month ago under the original sponsorship of the Veterans of Foreign Wars for the purpose of creating a memorial. The group is made up of representatives from many local organizations, with Mrs. Frank Porter as chairman.

Discussion has centered around possible uses of the old Washington Irving junior high school recently acquired by the city. Mayor George Christenson was present at the Wednesday night meeting to address the group and spoke favorably for the use of the building.

Mrs. Porter appointed a committee consisting of Mrs. John Gerke, Oscar Lee, Jack Fish, Mrs. Clara Palmer and Dr. A. L. V. Smith, whose members will work with a committee of five from each of the two veterans organizations to investigate expense and other matters connected with the use of the building.

SILVERTON—For a time it looked as if Silverton business houses would have to be moved back a bit to allow for the 100-foot stick of fir brought from the Jack Harpert ranch 22 miles southeast of Silverton to the Caffell Brothers who are loading cars at the Oregon Paper and Pulp plant here. The log containing about 4000 board feet, will be used for a high line. It is four feet at the butt and 34 inches at the top. Hauling the log were Forrest Barker, his son, Robert Barker, and Harley Fletcher of Albany.
