Don't Look Now...

but... Was a day when you could borrow a handkerchief now and then and build up a pretty good collection for yourself. These days the only ones anyone will let lose of is those nobody wants to keep. The other day someone had the nerve to lend me one that had laundry marks all over the middle of it.

Modern convenience... Now that they have a special parking spot on the Court street side of the postoffice block, so one can stop right there and mail a letter, why don't they have it fixed so an arm comes out, rolls down the car window, takes the letter out of one's hand, mails it and closes the window again?

Our sentiments too... From a well known woman's feature writer in the east comes this: "Oh joy! Oh happy release! Look what the OPA announces as exempt from price controls: angelica root; apricot kernels; Bercy sauce (imported); Carobean-honey bread or Alcarroba (imported); case hardening bone (imported and domestic); evaporated goat milk; octopus, dried, canned (imported and domestic); steamed bone meal; twist tobacco for chewing; and canned vine leaves (imported and domestic). At last we can sit down to a satisfying snack of canned octopus, Bercy sauce and apricot kernels with a nice little chaw of twist tobacco to finish things off. And all this without price control!

Anyway kids... We've found something good about Salem's street lights. The city's a grand place to see the stars, there's simply no interference...

Dear little time tellers... Outside my window the other day around noon the birds were cutting up a regular racket, then all of a sudden silence for a few seconds--and I knew it must be 20 minutes of, or 20 minutes after.

Diana uses lustrous rayon satin and satin lastex to make these two of our most popular girdles. Both have that wonderful up-and-down s-t-r-e-t-c-h in back, so when you stoop or sit it's never necessary to hitch your girdle down (unlovely gesture!) every time you stand up. And the panty girdle has Diana's famous detachable crotch which can be whisked out and Luxed, after every wearing—a joy to fastidiously dainty women. (Extra crotches, 59c.)
