Supreme Court Upholds Vets' Right to Occupy Park in Eugene

Attempted eviction of war veterans from their temporary housing in trailers at Sladden's park, Eugene, was thwarted again Tuesday, this time by the state supreme court which upheld Lane county circuit court's denying an injunction sought by property owners adjacent to the park.

The high court held that the veterans could continue use of the park during the duration of the housing emergency but not later than Jan. 1, 1948. Number of trailers in the park was restricted to 100. The suit was directed at the city of Eugene, Lane county court, and Willamette post No. 293, Veterans of Foreign Wars.

The opinion was written by Chief Justice Harry H. Belt, who said:

"If the project involved herein were of a permanent nature, we would have no hesitancy to grant injunctive relief to these abutting owners. However, it is clearly established that this veteran housing project is only to be maintained during a public emergency resulting from an acute housing shortage. It is only a temporary use of the park and does not substantially or materially interfere with the purposes for which the park was dedicated.

Inconvenience Slight
"The inconvenience and discomfort sustained by the plaintiff abutting owners by reason of this housing project is so slight compared to the hardship and injury which would result by the eviction of these veterans that equity should refuse injunctive relief. It is difficult to reconcile the mental attitude of persons whose aesthetic senses are shocked by these 'unsightly' trailer houses and yet make no objection to the use of the park as a cow pasture.

Emergency Measure
"We apprehend that these veterans and their families—includ-
