ARMY PAYS UP

The $275,500 for which the city of Salem has been dunning the U.S. army since 1943 arrived Saturday via treasury check from the army finance department in Portland to City Recorder Alfred Mundt. This check, Mundt said, repays the city for providing the army with utilities at the local airport for the period July 1, 1942, to May 1, 1943, when it was first under army operation. Since the latter date, city officials and even Oregon congressmen have fought the battle of red tape to collect the bill.
