Guard Units to Revive Battle Colors After Federal Service

Oregon will "welcome home" four combat regiments in ceremonies at the state capitol Wednesday afternoon featuring the return of battle standards to the state upon completion of six years of federal service by its national guard units.
 From the 2nd Infantry division at Fort Lewis, Wash., will come a detachment of 72 soldiers including a band and color guard which will parade briefly in downtown Salem preceding the 2:30 p.m. ceremony on the statehouse steps.

Mayor I. M. Doughton urges business houses to display the national colors on Wednesday afternoon when the parade and ceremonies attendant on return of regimental colors will be held.

Oregon's adjutant general office is planning to entertain the troops at luncheon and dinner in the Marion hotel. Troops will come in three buses before noon and will return in the early evening.
 Colors of the 162nd and 186th infantry regiments, the 218th field artillery and 249th coast artillery regiments, will be presented to Gov. Earl Snell by the officers who commanded the units when they went into federal service Sept. 16, 1940. They are Col. H. C. Burmbaugh, 162nd; Brig. Gen. R.
