Salem Weaver Talks, Shows Work at Luncheon Session of Silverton Women

By Maxine Buren

Woman's Editor, The Statesman

Examples of modern weaving and a discussion of this and its relation to early colonial weaving entertained members of the Silverton Women's club at a luncheon meeting Tuesday noon. Mrs. Lewis Anderson of Salem was the guest speaker, and her weaving was shown.

The speaker told about the early origin of the art of weaving and named some of the famous old weavers. She discussed early American weaving much of which took the form of coverlets, and she discussed the various mechanical devices for speeding up the weaving of materials.

Her woven work included examples of woolens, cottons and linen, some of the yarn from the local linen mills.

Mrs. Anderson, a member of the Weaving Guild of Salem, is one of a number of ambitious Salem women who do weaving at home for pleasure and some profit. She, like other weavers of the city, is looking forward to a national conference of weavers late next summer, which is planned for Salem.
