Council Seeks To Rebuild Its Suburban Line

SILVERTON, Dec. 3—First steps were taken Monday night by the city council to raise funds sufficient to rebuild the water lines to services outside the city limits. The question has been hanging fire for the past two years. Mayor George Christenson, in discussing the matter Monday, said that it was evident that the lines could not be rebuilt with city funds.

The council authorized the city attorney, Rex Albright, to draw a resolution increasing water rates for out of town users one and a half times that paid by those within the city limits. The resolution which will embody this, will also ask that the title of the water meters be turned over to the city. Indications were that the new rates might become effective by February 1.

City Manager Robert Borland reported that a survey he had completed showed 277 services outside of Silverton. Rebuilding costs were estimated at $18,071, figuring $65.24 to each service. A ten-year plan of payment was favored by the council. The matter was brought before the city planning commission, with Dr. P. A. Loar, commission member, presenting the recommendation.

Mayor Christenson also asked that Borland, R. G. Allen, council member and Albright, meet with Anton Dahl, chairman of the rural fire district, and members of the city fire department to work out definite plans for rural protection.
