Sorties: Stals Gill's OSCs will perhaps not win the northern di-vision bunting this time, but after watching them maneuver against Willamette, local natives are thoroughly convinced it will take a whale of a ball club to keep the Gills from the title. So rich are the Beaver prospects that Gill himself admits he doesn't know yet "what my best combination is." . . . With the 6 foot 7 inch Doug Martin in at either center or forward, at least onefifth of the combination is set. Martin looked better than the fine Red Rocha against the Cats.

NEW YORK, Dec. 17-(AP)-Behind closed doors, General Sessions Judge Francis L. Valente today ordered Alvin J. Paris held over night without bail on charges of attempted bribery of two New York Giants football players after police officers had testified about the reported possibility of an attempt to kill Paris to prevent him from going West's Shrine to trial. Assistant District Attorney George P. Monaghan said after the secret session that Valente would announce tomorrow his de-Outfit Named cision on bail for Paris.

Meanwhile, a grand jury pressed its investigation of the alleged attempt to "fix" last Sunday's professional football championship game between the Giants and the Chicago Bears.

portion of the tosses aimed at 'em didn't hit the jackpot as Coach Harold Hauk's Vik basketeers walked off with a 24-18 win over the visiting Democrats from Portland's Jefferson high. The low score triumph gained the locals ample revenge for a 31-30 set-back suffered at the hands of George Hibbard's lads last week on the Rose City court.

The kids on both sides were casting off enough last nightand they were coming very close time and again — but it just wasn't a hot night for either club. At that the Viks did have something of their normal efficiency in the initial half as they worked up a 17-9 margin as the rest perlod came. But in the third quarter the Hauks tallied not a pointand what a life saver that halftime lead proved as the Jeffs managed to wrangle six counters of their own which closed the gap to two points. As the fourth stanza opened, with things looking appallingly bad for the Salems, Dick Mase sank a gift toss - the first Vik score in nine minutes - and then it was Mr. Dick Allison the peppery little sub guard who turned on the gas and pulled the Hauks out of danger. Allison canned a pair of nifty 20 foot push shots within the space of seconds to up the count to 22-15. The Salems got no more field goals after this but the game was safe as the Hibbards could never get a rally going.

The one fightingly close quarter was the opener when the two clubs matched point for point.
