Amidst the light touch of snow that hit the old town the past week-and the general griping and grumbling that accompanied the thin blanket-there was at least one individual in the vicinity who surely welcomed the "white stuff." For to Bill Bowes, snow brings reminders of the ski trails and the unique thrill of slat competition, (Not that the local boy could have worked out very much in the skimpy powdering.) Tough competition the ski game affords - tough and dangerous - but Bill has met a let of the best of 'em and walked off with

Now to become a top-grade exponent of the popular winter sport you don't, in the beginning stages, have to have a pair of the best skis on the market - and you don't have to take lessons at five bucks an hour from an instructor. At least Bill didn't.

It all started some 10 years ago - and it started very unpretentiously, too. Just some very rudimentary skis formed of barrel staves from the vinegar factory across the street, and ski runs grooved in the surrounding orchards. The Bowes boys, Bill and his brother Bob, figured it was at least the beginning. On the infrequent occasions of sufficient snow fall locally both of them were familiar sights out in the Polk county hills risking a bad spill riding the rough trails they'd formed. Then came the trips to Mt. Hood, the working with top skierswhich Bill says is the only way to make progress in the sport. Won College Title

BIEL BOWES

Bill progressed amazingly and in 1942, competing under the colors of Oregon State, he won the Pacific Coast intercollegiate title at Yosemite, Calif. Came the call to colors and the Salem lad quite appropriately found himself assigned to the 10th mountain division. He served out the war in the Aleutian theatre, and at the same time continued hard at perfecting himself-for he had a growing ambition to make the 1948 Olympics team. (What higher mark can an amateur slatsman shoot at) Bill threw himself vigorously into competion after his army discharge. His latest triumph was the Class A title in the Portland day races at Mt. Hood a month ago.

This Sunday he aims to chalk up more laurels in the Northwest open at Mt. Hood, which includes both downhill and slalom events. A win here would bring the Salemite one step closer to fulfilling that Olympics ambition. Bill is, however, particularly priming for the national championships to be held in Utah March 1 and 2. which will have direct bearing on Olympic choices.

Fundamentals Important

Asked for any advice he might proffer beginning sklers. Bill modestly retorts: "Don't try to learn everything in one day, get the fundamentals first. And at every opportunity ski with those who are GOOD at it." 'The most difficult phases of skiing?" Here are blonde-thatched Bill's nominations: the high-speed turn and deep snow competition. Incidentally, the local luminary spent a recent week at Sun Valley where he worked the trails with some of the top-notchers straight win. Gene Garver paced including Gorgette Thiollire, European women's champ, whom he

Any broken arms or legs in his career? Bill shakes his head, grins-knocks on wood, "Naw, just a few sprains." Good luck to you, Bill Bowes, and the whole town hopes you're among those present when the Olympic squad sails for Europe

Oregon State's Beavers came from behind tonight to move into the lead of the Pacific Coast conference Northern division basketball race by defeating the Oregon Ducks, 58 to 45. It was the 16th win in 17 games for the Beavers, and the fourth straight conference victory. Combined with Washington's defeat at the hands of Washington State tonight, it put the Beavers stop Pacific Northwest standings.

Oregon State trailed in the first half, which ended 21-20, Oregon leading. But the Beavers rallied quickly as the second half opened, moved into a three-point lead within three minutes and lengthened the margin from then until the final gun.

At one point in the first half, Oregon held a seven-point advantage, 20-13, but Alex Peterson and Lew Beck of the Beavers na rowed the gap in 'the final three minutes of the period. Then with the Beavers dominating the backboards, particularly Peterson, who was high scorer with 17 points, Oregon State moved ahead. The Ducks were held scoreless the first 41'2 minutes of the second period, while the Bea-
