

Prosecutor Wins Debate Over Witness

VALE, Ore., March 3—(AP)—The state late today won court permission to place on the stand Alvin Lee Williams, 23, key witness in the prosecution case against comely Mrs. W. D. Broadhurst, accused of plotting her husband's death.

After hearing two hours of argument, Circuit Judge M. A. Biggs ruled that the state wants him to testify at once if the state wants him to verify that a crime was committed—but he cannot talk about Mrs. Broadhurst's complicity until it is proved he and Mrs. Broadhurst conspired in the crime.

Earlier Williams, accused of firing the shotgun blast that killed the wealthy Broadhurst last October, took the stand momentarily. Then both he and the jury were dismissed while rival attorneys argued whether his testimony should be admitted.

Williams' trial on a first-degree murder charge is scheduled to follow that of Mrs. Broadhurst. The prosecution said he has confessed.

The red hot liquid lava was expected to advance only a few more feet down the volcano's steep slopes before it cooled and hardened, assuring mountain-side dwellers of no further damage, the ministry said.
