REPORT TO TELEPHONE USERS

We're Doing Our Best to Get the Strike Settled Early... Both to Employees and to Telephone Users Who Pay the Cost of Service.

We've negotiated now for more than two months. But the strike situation is, at best, confusing. There are seventeen telephone unions on the coast. It's difficult to reconcile the widely differing demands of several unions and reach a basis for a settlement that is fair to all concerned.

More than 18,000 of our employees are working strenuous shifts, night and day, to keep service going. We appreciate, deeply their recognition of the public interest. And we believe telephone users appreciate it, too.

Fairness must be the foundation of any settlement. The final agreement must be fair to telephone employees whose skill and energy make service possible . . . and it must be fair to telephone customers who, in the last analysis, pay the costs of service.
