Clackamas County Petitions Ask Cattle Get Disease Test

By Lillie L. Madsen
Farm Editor, The Statesman

Petitions are being circulated in Clackamas county in an effort to complete testing of all cattle in that county. Plans are to present this petition before the county court at a public hearing in compliance with the state Bang's law.

Sponsoring the petition is the Clackamas County Livestock association and its disease control committee composed of Andrew Gribble of Malolla; Walter Stiehely and Ernest Jost of Oregon City; E. W. Reid, Clarkes, and Rognar Anderson of Colton.

Prompted by changes in the Oregon Bang's law made by the recent legislature, the Clackamas county livestock control committee met at Oregon City last week to discuss the changes as they apply to Clackamas county. It was emphasized by Brandt, however, that of the total number of cattle in the county, including beef and dairy, this percentage would be considerably higher.

Professor Brandt reported on recent findings relative to how Bang's disease is manifested in humans.

Changes in the Oregon Bang's law include: The maximum per head charges permissible to be paid county veterinarians was removed. County courts may now pay veterinarians on a monthly, yearly or any basis satisfactory to the court and the veterinarian. May Be Changed to Herd Owners

The county court may, but does not have to, charge any portion up to one-half of the cost of testing to the herd owners. Such charges, if any, are to be collected by the county as are other taxes. It is reiterated that option 3 reactors are to be slaughtered Nov. 1, 1947, but the owners will be indemnified by the county and state.

All beef animals are removed from the compulsory testing provisions of the law, but the county court, upon receipt of a petition signed by 100 or more herd owners and based upon determinations made at a public hearing may, by court order, make the compulsory testing provisions ap-
