Ranch Ramblings

By Rural Reporter

Some 80 Oregon Jerseymen from Linn and Benton counties, along with families, friends and visitors from neighboring counties assembled Sunday at the attractive farm home of N. V. Shelby and Sons near Albany for the May Linn-Benton Jersey Cattle club meeting. The warm sun made an ideal day for visitors to look over some of the Shelby cattle, eyeing especially the two animals recently imported from the Isle of Jersey and bought by the Shelys from Rex Ross of Mt. Angel, importer, Floyd Wolberg, who will judge the two-county Jersey show on May 23, was a special guest. Announcement was made that around 100 head will be exhibited.

John Banick of Brooks is proud of his 45 purebred Dorset Horned sheep. The breed is unusual in that the ewes have lambs at any time of the year "spring lambs" having no meaning for the Dorset breed. One Dorset ewe on the Banick farm had six lambs within two years and produced 11 pounds of wool annually, with no supplemental feeding during that time.

Judges named for the June 7 Marion County Fat Lamb show at Turner are Harry Lindgren, O. M. Nelson, Floyd Fox, Claude Steuflott and Ronald Hogg. The show committee has incorporated and is no longer under the Farmers Union as in former days. Directors of the newly formed association are Henry Ahrens, manager; Margaret M. Miller, secretary; Karl Wipper, Carl Steiwar, Louis Hennies, John Peterson, Walter Miller, Everett Crabtree, Arthur Gath and Merlie Pearson. The premium list and awards total $500, besides the $95 premium money to go in the 10th annual state dog trials.

Larry Goss of Stayton widely known in the bean raising world, has bought 100 acres to the south of Turner over the hill from the Cloverdale community.
