Vet Students Told Of Summer Jobless Pay Regulations

Student veterans who do not attend school during the summer must be available for suitable jobs in order to receive GI readjustment allowances of $20 per week, Silas Gaiser, state unemployment compensation commission director, warned Wednesday.

If a veteran accepts readjustment allowances while also receiving subsistence payments or while not eligible for any other reason, "he loses not only further rights under the GI bill but also may be subject to prosecution by federal authorities," said Gaiser.

Dropping steadily, payments of readjustment allowances have reached the 5,000 mark, about half the number in early May of last year. Applications for allowances have been filed by 65,000 Oregon veterans, of whom 1,100, less than 2 per cent, have exhausted their rights.
