Two Dundees

To our desk has come a letter from the overseas editor of the "People's Journal" of Dundee, Scotland, also a copy of his paper. He is writing to get information about the town of Dundee, Ore., as he is writing to learn about other Dundees round the world.

The original Dundee is the third largest city in Scotland. It is over 650 years old, on the east coast of Scotland overlooking the broad estuary of the River Tay.

The "People's Journal" is one of a feature paper than our daily papers. It has a comic page, one of the strips being "Jock McSkerte"—apparently a Scottish version of Mickey Mouse.

The paper, as do many English and Canadian papers, runs many memorial notices inserted by relatives on anniversaries of the deaths of their loved ones.

So much for old Dundee. Its Oregon namesake is not so large and not so old, but it has a claim to fame as being the center of the nut industry of the northwest.

Wool and World Trade

A close-in fight has been waged in the house of representatives over the wool bill. At the demand of the wool-growers' association the house passed a bill which contained a continuation of a government guarantee on the price of wool but a provision permitting the levy of an import fee of 50 per cent of the current tariff of 34c a pound.

Undersecretary of State Will Clayton was so concerned over the matter that he came home from Geneva where he has been negotiating trade treaties under the reciprocal trade agreement act.

If the house version of the bill prevails, a veto by the president would seem almost certain. He has always staunchly supported the reciprocal trade act, and this would cut the life out of it.

Republicans are traditionally committed to protection; but they surely know enough mathematics to know that some way must be found to balance trading accounts with other nations.

Keep Oregon Green

"What's cooking?" That is a familiar question. Today the answer is, besides the berry crop and the eastern Oregon wheat crop, the forests of Oregon.

This warm sun and steady north wind are drying out the forests. There wasn't much snow in them last winter and there has been little rain this spring.

We do not seem able to get the wind to alter its direction and blow from the southwest for a spell, rolling in the moisture-laden clouds.

Build no campfire save at appointed spots; and drench your fire thoroughly when through with it till the last spark is out.

Keep Oregon green by keeping out the fires.

No results yet from our appeal to the Oregonian to entice or command Jupiter Pluvius to get out with his watering can. The Ogn editor urged people to go to church last Sunday, so we felt sure he might be there with prayers for rain.

Nothing shows quite so clearly the fact that the "war is over" than the treatment of the Mormon cricket story in the newspapers and on the radio. It was a featured front-page story "with art" in the Oregonian two mornings and given front page prominence in other daily papers.

Here is once when we can say Do Look Now—at Look magazine, which in a recent issue played up the west in picture and text. It devotes space to extolling the advantages of the Pacific coast. If it stimulates more people to move out here it ought to advise them to bring their housing with them.

Speaking of the wheat crop in the mid-Columbia section The Dalles Chronicle admits this isn't going to be a bumper year. More of a bump year, we guess.

At Butte a Northwest airlines plane skidded on a wet runway and landed in a cemetery. Fortunately none of the crew or passengers had to stay there.

Removal of the 20 per cent excise tax on furs is urged. In this weather removal of the furs is more satisfactory.

Although the national guard isn't camping at Camp Jackson any more, Medford is still the pacesetter on heat.

big loss of veteran educators. There is the risk of having to take the place of their qualifications, which simply means that students are going to be cheated who take courses under such instructors.

County Bridges Out of Service

County bridge crews are to work today on two bridges which are temporarily out of service and are to be replaced immediately. Without damage to the vehicle, a logging truck was removed from where it had gone through the decking of a bridge over Cherry Creek on the Mehama-Mill City road.

Replacement is under way, according to County Commissioner Ed Rogers. Piling is being driven for a new span on the Lake Labish road, to replace one which gave out due to wear.
