

Don't Look Now...

but... in a conversation during the first band concert in Willson avenue, Russell Brooks, member of the consular service who was spending one of his infrequent visits to his home town, was speaking of the beauties of Salem. He declared that he had never in all his travels, seen a city with such a beautifully laid out city center, with the courthouse grounds, postoffice, Willson avenue and capital grounds. Many a city, declared he, would pay most any price for such a layout. He declared his surprise that the city would consider breaking into this city center with a bus depot. Surely, said he, some other place could be found, just as suited to use, yet one which would not destroy the vista of lawns and public buildings. "If the depot is built, it will be only the first of such commercial infringements made in the name of 'progress.'"

In clover... We have on our desk a bulletin in which we are informed that the U. S. department of agriculture has been doing work on how to make all clovers have four leaves. We are told at great length that they have been trying to work out a four, four-leaf clover, and how heartbroken they are at not succeeding -- in a word they are out of luck. Maybe in the interest of economy they'll eliminate the synthetic four-leaf clover bureau.

And speaking of luck... We were talking to a man who dropped a piece of bread, buttered side down and who remarked that he was going to spread butter on the head side of a coin, go out and match pennies with it, and rake in a fortune. Of course, said he, the buttered side would always be down.

Big time... Well, seems for the Cherry Festival (it used to be "fair") they have pretty girls, horses, dancers, singers, merry-go-rounds and everything -- except we haven't heard about any cherries.
