No Redivision In Offing for Salem Court

Marion county has no intention of adding the area of the former Salem justice of the peace district outside the city to any other justice district, County Judge Grant Murphy said Monday.

The statement was made relative to a decision handed down Monday by Attorney General George Neuner who ruled that the Salem district may be redistricted and added to other justice of the peace districts if the county court deems it advisable, but such action is not mandatory.

Neuner also pointed out that the jurisdiction of the new Salem district court extends to the entire county. The opinion was made for Marion County District Attorney Miller B. Hayden.

"The decision was sought to clarify the situation," Judge Murphy said Monday. "The court is satisfied that the area under quescourt."
