Counties Differ in Filing Fees Under New Law, Ruling Awaited

Difficulty in interpreting the new law regarding filing and recording fees of migratory chattel mortgages marred the first month under the new fee system, Marion County Recorder Herman Lanke said Wednesday.

It is expected, said Lanke, that a request for an opinion from the attorney general's office may resolve difficulties being experienced by county clerks and recorders over the state in interpreting the new chattel mortgage fees law passed by the 1947 legislature.

An opinion rendered Saturday by the attorney general, however, failed to clear the air regarding migratory chattel fees, Lanke said. Letters and telephone calls from over the state have convinced him that the new law is running into difficulties in virtually every county.

Complaints Received
Local banks and finance companies as well as individuals have complained to Lanke. Their chief complaint is that various counties are charging different fees for the same recording, he said. Migratory chattels, which make up a large bulk of the recorder's office business, are mortgages on autos, other vehicles and anything licensed by the secretary of state's office.

The new fee system went into effect July 5. Under the old system the fee on filing a migratory chattel mortgage was $1.25 (50 cents of which was remitted to the secretary of state's office). Twenty-five cents of the collected amount was retained by the recorder's office as payment for making a certificate of the mortgage.

Procedure Unclear
Under the new law, according to the attorney general's opinion last week, the fee is $1.50. Fifty cents goes to the secretary of state as usual, but nothing is said about a 25-cent charge for the making of a certificate.

The main problem, according to Lanke, hinges on whether to charge an added 25 cents for the certificate recording or not. Some counties are adding the charge, some are not and some are charging 50 cents extra.

When the law went into effect July 5, Lanke's office charged $1.75 per migratory chattel, but this week he came down to $1.50, to the confusion of many of his customers he said.

Mrs. Orin E. Eller
922 S. WATER STREET, SILVERTON, OREGON

says . . .

"Electricity takes the 'work' out of 'housework'"

Mrs. Orin Eller speaks from experience when she says that electricity takes most of the work out of her daily job as a housewife. Before moving to Oregon she and Mr. Eller spent many years of their life on a North Dakota farm, without electricity. She well knows the muscle-energy and back-bending required to keep house without the help of electric servants.

"Now, with my electric appliances, the housework is done for me instead of by me," says Mrs. Eller. "With my vacuum cleaner, for example, I accomplish in an hour what used to take the entire morning by hand-and-back exercise.

"I feel the same way about all my other electrical appliances—every one means extra leisure. Since going 'all-electric' I have plenty of time to relax, to enjoy doing the things I like best."

Mrs. Eller uses these appliances in her All-Electric Home
