Sharing Isotopes

Bob Considine, writing for Hearst's International News Service, asserts that the decision of President Truman to provide "Russian and other foreign scientists" with radio-active isotopes for medical and biological research "came as a distinct His position would be stronger if shock to the United States atomic energy experts, Bernard M. Baruch and Maj. Gen. Leslie R. Groves." He adds that neither was consulted, and declares that these "experts" and "other authorities" believe the government is making "a grave blunder."

This sounds like a Hearstling's bid for favor from his boss. In the first place neither Baruch nor Groves is an "atomic energy expert." Groves acted as war department executive for the Manhattan project but is not a scientist at all. Baruch prepared a report dealing with control of the manufacture and use of atomic ties of material editors receive energy, and he is no scientist. Groves has been sulking ever since from the Morse office, the senator the military was displaced as tophand in the control of our atomic is eager to have himself and his energy development. He may oppose the distribution of radioactive isotopes but his judgment on a scientific matter like that is of no value.

What are the radio-active isotopes being offered to "Rusgian and other" foreign scientists? They are, we presume, particles of uranium or plutonium which are radio-active. They are not bombs, and as Considine admits are non-explosive. These particles are of great value in biological research. Medical research men in particular have wanted them for use in studying disease in the human body and the reactions from using such particles in treating disease. Sharing these particles with scientists the world over is a contribution to human health and happiness that is a valuable offset to the destructive character of the atom bomb.

Considine quotes unnamed authorities to the effect that foreign (Russian) scientists may learn something about how to To the Editor: make atom bombs from these radio-active isotopes. We do not pose as a scientific authority, but are quite willing to accept the decision of President Truman which undoubtedly was based on the recommendation of our own scientists and the atomic energy control commission. They probably know a lot more about the chusetts" company. No mention matter than Considine, Hearst newspapers and the authorities of Oregon.

Americans need to remember that they have leaned on foreign research for many of the modern remedies now in daily use. Insulin was developed by Canadian scientists; penicillin by English scientists. Russian doctors have given the world a serum had a little gumption we would claimed as a cancer cure. We cannot well expect other nations to share their secrets if we withhold ours. The whole body of knowledge is advanced when scientific discoveries are shared. We cannot be and ought not to be dog-in-the-manger on release chamber of commerce, our legislaof information about atomic fission-especially when the military itself approved disclosure of most of the scientific information respecting manufacture of the atom bomb. After all our development of the atom bomb depended on research of Italian, German and Danish physicists and mathematicians. It is by no means a strictly American job.

The Considine story is one to arouse fears, in our judgment To the Editor: without warrant, and may be just part of the Hearst parade of hate against Russia.

Sympathy Strike

Sympathy strikes are by no means uncommon. Workers power to harness the stream and often quit when one of their number gets fired. But at a mine in provide a forerunner to make way Wales the other day 299 miners and haulers quit after a pony for the construction of that localhad lost his job.

It was this way, says a press report: A miner named Will Rees had worked five years at hauling coal using a pony named Bomber. One day the boss substituted another pony, Briton, and Will Rees guit work in protest. So did the 299 other workers in the mine; and they stayed out until the management put Bomber back on the job with Will Rees.

No wonder the British are short of coal!

Greece wants more military aid from the United States; Oregon. Turkey wants more economic assistance than military aid. It seems that Turkey "faces a crisis"—a more immediate danger than 35 soviet divisions," and needs $400 million in a World bank this will be the sportsman's paraloan PDQ to avert it. Sometimes we wonder if these crises aren't dise. getting to be a habit.

WHADDA YA MEAN, "DESOLATE"

The United Press correspondent at Sweet Home reports that the police believed that the two men who robbed the Sweet Home bank on Friday "escaped into the rugged Cascade mountains or beyond into the wild desert country of eastern Oregon." In the Oregonian news room a rewrite man said that "the escape route, if followed (over the Santiam highway) would take them through the Santiam pass over Mid-week Bible study, prayer, Wedthe Cascades into rough and desolate country.'

We rise to protest those adjectives. The desert country east of the M. B. CHURCH Cascades is neither wild nor desolate. Only in rare spots is it rough. It is beautiful. It is open. It is colorful. It is crossed by paved highways and the inter-connecting roads are, for the most part, easy and

County Plans Workshop for Teachers, Principals on Sept. 13

In preparation for the fall opening of school in Marion county, a teachers' workshop for elementary school principals and teachers of one-room schoolhouses will be held in the courthouse here September 13.

Presided over by Mrs. Agnes Booth, Marion county school superintendent, the annual conference is expected to be attended by about 100 teachers from county schools, exclusive of Silverton and Salem districts. The conference is slated to begin at 9:30 a. m. in circuit court chambers.

Salem district schools will hold similar conference for new and old teachers September 10, 11 and 12 at the school administration office and at the senior high school In Silverton district the conference is scheduled September 8, 9 and 10 Discussion Schedule

Scheduled for discussion at the county workshop are the county's school policies, cooperation with the county health department and the 4-H program, new text books and new school laws.

Most county schools will open pupils in all schools in Marion son and neighbors. county, including Salem and Silverton, is expected to be slightly topped this year, Mrs. Booth said. Early estimates indicate a larger enrollment in the first and second grades. Crowded classrooms will continue to be a burden this year, she indicated.

This year is expected to see more efficient operation of the two-year-old state law requiring children to remain in school until high school graduation or until they reach the age of 18. Mrs. Booth also reminded that entrance age in all county schools is six years on or before November 15 of this year. She advised parents to send birth certificates with new

To Organize Salem Chapter

Preliminary organization of a Salem chapter of the Exchange club, national service group, was effected Friday when a group of local business and professional men met with J. Branch Donelson, director of extension for the national organization.

At a funcheon meeting in the Golden Pheasant resturant, the new group elected William Phillips temporary president, Williams Phelps, temporary secretary, and Jack Hay, temporary treasurer. The executive membership committee is composed of Bill Dyer, Orvil Lama, Phillips and Phelps, The Exchange club, which lays claim to being the oldest of service organizations, dates its history to 1896.

Its purposes are to "Exchange" ideas and plans among civic and business leaders and to foster education and worthy civic projects. The lone Exchange club in Oregon is in Portland, where it has been in existence for 19 years.

Donelson, who is staying in Salem until organization of the Salem unit is completed, plans to organize at least five chapters in Oregon, the basic requirement for the formation of a state coun-

Next meeting of the local group will be 12:15 Wednesday, the place yet to be determined.
