mission as of today is $899,244 in debt to banks, borrowed to make up the difference between its net revenue and its obligation to the public welcome commission, but its indebtedness has not increased appreciably within the last three months.

That was the state's picture when the news arrived Tuesday from Atlantic City, N. J. of the cancellation of a deal with distilleries by which the state liquor commission apparently had been aiming at a profit estimated at $1.341.995.

State Treasurer Leslie Scott told the Statesman Tuesday his department did not know whether cancellation of the deal would make any difference in the future expectable revenue for public welfare, nor to what extent.

From all available information here, the deal appeared to be this:

The state in 1946 bought 8,000

The Oregon state liquor com- barrels (400,000 gallons) of whisky at $10.12 a gallon. Earlier this year, with demand dropping on it, an agreement was made whereby the state would return the whisky to distillers at $10.75 a gallon-a profit of 63 cents a gallon or a total of $252,000.

The state in return was to purchase the same amount of other whisky in bottles (400,000 gallons or 83,333, cases) by which it could make a net profit of $13,20 a case-a total profit of $1,089,995.

The entire deal, therefore, was predicted on a combined profit of $252,000 plus $1,089,995 for grand total of $1,341,995.

However, by the cancellation date of next November 30 it liquor is estimated the state will have one of the knottiest problems of only 6,000 of its original 8,000 the last legislature - the libarrels, and therefore presumquor commission insisting the budget should not anticipate ably will have made its profit on more than $14,000,000 net and the other 2,000 barrels-or on the governor placing the estione fourth of the deal. A tentative proposal for an era derly but flexible five-year pro-gram enabling Salem school dist-rict to meet the needs of a growing "tidal wave" of the younger generation was placed before the school board Tuesday night by Superintendent Frank B. Bennett. In discussion which favored developing and pursuing such a plan, which in its first phase includes nine new school buildings, the board indicated that a single bond issue for perhaps $2,000,000 might be required.

After presenting statistics numerically and graphically to show the Salem area's rapid population growth, through births alone, Bennett declared the schools must do one of three things -- obtain quonset huts and prepare other temporary measures to meet the influx as it de-Log rafts continue to pile up in the Willamette river from Corvallis to Portland this week as ideal velops, plan from year to year with separate bondings efforts or make a long-range program to of the log rafts moored near the Center street bridge. The board took no formal action but plans to officially develop such a long term program. Births in Marion county have ncreased considerably since the late '30s and at a greatly accelerated rate since the end of World War II, it was shown. Even disregarding the large immigration to this section, Bennett said birth statistics projected into future classes show local school population six years from now half

Noting the steady diminu-tion of outstanding indebtedness and the strong cash position of the various funds at the close of the fiscal year and the growth in earnings of the water department I couldn't help having a very comfortable feeling. Tuesday morning's paper however reported the plan of the city manager. J. L. Franzen, for building a sewage disposal plant with interceptor sewer lines and sewer extensions, which will require an additional bond issue of some $815,-000, and the "comfortable feeling" was somewhat dissipated.

First, let's take a look at the city's debt statement. Of bonds serviced from the tax levy there remained unpaid as of June 30th last $472,500 out of a total issued of $1,259,500. In this fiscal year $72,000 will be retired and in the following fiscal year $55,500 would leave a total of $345,000. The total interest requirement on these bonds for the current fiscal year is only $8,801.79.

Of the total issue of $2,100,000 for the water system $1,885,000 remains outstanding. Against this the water department had sinking fund investments of over $357,000 as of Dec. 31, 1946. Revenues of the water system are expected to be sufficient to (Continued on Editorial Page)
