There were a lot of just plain sick people around the town yesterday at about 10 minutes to one. It had been a gripping drama-one of the most suspenceful moments in world series history - and Bill Bevens had been so close, just one batter removed from immortality, terrible, a dismal climax for "Bev" and his hometown rooters and, yes, for Yankee fans in general. One out to go, guys tensing themselves before radies all over town, awaiting the pitch, beginning to believe that fate had picked out Big Bill to rack the first no-hitter in series history-and then wham! If ever pure unbelieving shock was registered in the human eye it was present around local radios yesterday when Cookie connect-

At that, it was a fine game Bill hurled—a one hitter though he did give up an unprecedented 10 walks. And, ironically enough, Hugh Casey, the Dodger's ace fireman, was credit-

Oregon State goes north to Seattle today to take on the Washington Huskies, and we've a hunch you'll see a rip-roaring bunch of Orangemen, hungry for the kill. Salem Ace Comes Closer to Feat Than Any Hurler in Series History

By Gayle Talbot

EBBETS FIELD, Brooklyn, Oct. 3-(A)-Floyd (Bill) Bevens of the New York Yankees was two strikes away from a no-hit game and baseball immortality today when Harry (Cookie) Lavagetto, veteran Brooklyn pinchhitter, lashed a vicious double off the right field wall at Ebbetts field to knock across two runs and give the Brooklyn Dodgers a thrilling 3-2 victory in the fourth game of the world series, In probably the most dramatic, finish in the 44-year history of the classic, Lavagetto, hitting for Eddie Stanky, swung at Bevens' first pitch and missed. On the second he took a full cut and whaled the ball almost on a line to right as the crowd of 34,443 sent up a full-throated bellow, Tommy Henrich, Yank rightfielder, made a desperate leap into the air, but the pellet thudded against the boards several feet from his glove.

For eight and two-third innings, Bevens, a 29-year-old righthander from Salem, Ore., had throttled the Dodgers. Until he made his last fateful pitch he faced the prospect of being the first pitcher ever to hurl a no-hitter in a series game. As it was, he tied two other flingers, Claude Passeau and Ed Reulbach, both of the Chicago Cubs, in heaving a one-hitter.

What made the defeat even more bitter for Bevens was the fact that he put both the tying and winning runs on base with free passes. In all, he issued a record-breaking total of 10 walks during the game, and the last two finally ruined him.

For the second straight game, Hugh Casey, portly Dodger relief pitcher, gained credit for the victory which deadlocked the playoff at two wins each. He threw exactly one pitch, with the bases full of Yankees and one out in the ninth inning. Henrich whacked it back at him, and Casey tossed to Catcher Bruce Edwards to Lynam, Hayamaki in Jacket Go start a double play.

Bevens, after watching Lava-getto's blast hit the wall, turned dejectedly and trudged off the field, a forlorn figure. He owned the distinction of having pitched more hitless innings than any man ever before in a world series, but that was small recompense for the bauble which escaped his

The big right hander, who was one out away from tossing the first no-hitter in world series annals, groped for words as reporters, feeling his remorse, slowly asked questions. Asked what kind of a ball Cookle Lavagetto of the Dodgers hit for his game winning double in the ninth, Bevens replied: "A high fast ball, a little on the outside." Later, while sipping a bottle of beer, Bevens shook his head when he was reminded he set a new series record by walking ten batters. "Every time you walk some-body, you'll get into trouble. A walk counts as much as a hit," Before the series Manager

Bucky Harris confidentially named Bevens as his "sleeper." "Watch this boy in the series, Harris said of Bevens, who had just completed a most disappointing season.
