Pastor Offers Redwood Tree As U.S. Symbol

If America ever needs another national symbol, it should adopt the strong and lofty redwood tree, in the opinion of the Rev. Brooks Moore, pastor of the First Methodist church here, who addressed the Salem Board of Realtors at Friday's luncheon in the Marion hotel.

Those trees are "tall, straight and true," declared Moore and "we need men to match the trees" in order to gain the dreamed-of post-war world.

The forest giants have survived the ages not by accident but by learning to cooperate with nature, said Moore. They grow straight to overcome gravity's pull, brace themselves on the weakest side and heal their wounds by growing scar tissue which is known as a bark. They have the ability to "grow a new top," which is much needed by "those who rise above the crowd," since they are in more danger.

Highly important, said the speaker, is the fact that the trees cooperate by sending their roots down and intertwining them to withstand outside pressures as a group. He credited a similar policy, dependence upon a society of mutual aid, with providing much of the United States' strength.

Bernau Passes Law Exams

Fred Bernau, Willamette university college of law graduate now residing in Salem, successfully passed recent state bar examinations and yesterday received his certificate from the state supreme court.

Bernau, a pre-war student at Willamette, has been taking additional academic work at the local law school this year.

Four other men receiving certificates yesterday were: Sidney B. Lewis and James F. Loneragan, both of Portland; Gordon Reeves, Milwaukie, and Joseph F. Walker, formerly of Portland.

Forty successful applicants, out of 60 writing in the examinations, previously received their certificates.

Restaurant Grading Ends

City Restaurant Inspector William B. Quinn has completed the grading of 60 Salem restaurants, 19 of which have been awarded "A" cards.

Of the others 28 have "B" cards, which compare with "A" cards in standard of cleanliness and general sanitation, and 13 have "C" cards which indicate changes must be made within a reasonable time.

Several "C" graded restaurants have "cleaned up" and subsequently won "B" cards, Quinn reported, but one "C" restaurant closed its doors. Quinn has given other local restaurants preliminary inspection and advice, but in many cases has not formally graded them.

Stock Raisers Await Canby Sheep Show

By Lillie L. Madsen
Farm Editor, The Statesman

Next big event on the calendar of the Willamette valley livestock men is the Northwest Registered Columbia Sheep show and sale scheduled for November 2 and 3 at Canby fairgrounds. Sponsored jointly by the Western Columbia Sheep Breeders association and the Oregon Columbia Sheep Breeders association, this sale will include from 50 to 100 bred-ewes and from five to 10 rams.

R. W. Davis, assistant county agent in Clackamas county, has been named sales manager with Marcus Vetter, Woodburn, and E. J. Handley, McMinnville, serving on the sales committee.

Consignments for the sale have been made from Columbia breeders in Montana, Utah, Colorado, Idaho and Wyoming. Among the breeders bringing sheep in, is Ernest White who owns the oldest flock of privately owned Columbian in the nation, and is recognized as the father of the breed. The Oregon sale will precede another to be held in Ogden, Utah, by two weeks.

Outlining the history of the breed, William K. Snyder, secretary of the Western States Association, says that Columbia sheep were developed by the U. S. Department of Agriculture as a true breeding type to replace cross breeding on the range. In 1912, rams of the long wool breeds were crossed with high quality rambouillet ewes to produce larger animals yielding more pounds of wool and more pounds of lamb.

The first cross — Lincoln-Rambouillet line — was the most promising. The Bureau of Animal Industry maintained this line and by intensive breeding and selection produced a true-breeding strain with the characteristics of the superior cross-bred line.

Moved To Idaho In 1918

The original cross was made at Laramie, Wyo., and the foundation of the government flock was moved to the sheep experiment station at Dubois, Idaho in 1918.

Charles Evans, Salem, is a strong advocate of this breed of sheep.

Dr. Blair Stewart, professor of economics at Reed college, will show the relationship between wages, prices and production and their effect on employment-labor relations.

The Reverend Joseph D. Munier, professor of industrial ethics, St. Patrick's Seminary, Menlo park, Calif., will have for his subject "Organized Cooperation of Industry and Management for the Establishment of a Moral Economic Order."

Parolees' Credit Problems Aired At Club Luncheon

Credit as it affects the parolee was the topic of a talk by George A. Hall, district parole officer, at the Salem Credit association luncheon Friday noon in the Nelson building.

Hall drew from his experience with parolees over a period of years to show that business houses such as are represented in the Salem credit association may help individuals seeking rehabilitation.

"We do not guarantee accounts nor will we act as a collecting agency," Hall said, "but parole officers will help you get the information you need in extending credit," Hall said.

He intimated that the blame for losses suffered in the credit accounts of parolees should be given to the firm extending credit, since in many cases it had not inquired sufficiently into the parolee's ability to pay.

Hall spoke to an overflow crowd. Community property will be the subject considered at the meeting October 24.

PGE ELECTION EXPENSES

The Portland General Electric company contributed $3,000 to the Oregon sales tax committee which led the fight for the sales tax at the recent special election, an expense statement filed in the state department here Friday disclosed.

Foise of the Waterfront Employers' Association, San Francisco, will have for his subject "A Constructive Plan for Employer-Labor Relations"; Harry Reed of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, will come from Washington, D. C. to discuss "Constructive Bargaining and Industrial Relations"; Earl Anderson, director of the State Department of Labor and Industry, Olympia, Wash., enters the discussion to show relationship between full employment and production.

Blair Stewart speaker

Dr. Blair Stewart, professor of economics at Reed college, will show the relationship between wages, prices and production and their effect on employment-labor relations.

The Reverend Joseph D. Munier, professor of industrial ethics, St. Patrick's Seminary, Menlo park, Calif., will have for his subject "Organized Cooperation of Industry and Management for the Establishment of a Moral Economic Order."

The Reverend George C. Higgins, assistant director of the Social action department of the National Catholic Welfare conference, Washington, D. C., will give an appraisal of the economic order.

Continues Through October

The conference on industrial problems will continue through October 28 at which time "Social Legislation" and "The Interdependence of Agriculture and Industry" and other problems of rural life will be stressed. Outstanding in the speakers will be Monsignor Luigi G. Ligutti, executive secretary of the National Catholic Rural Life Conference.

The conference which is held under the patronage of the Most Reverend Edward D. Howard, archbishop of Portland, with the cooperation of the Bishops of the other six dioceses of Oregon, Washington, Montana and Idaho, is expected to draw a good delegation from the Northwest. All sessions will be held in the Neighbors of Woodcraft Hall, and will be open to the public.

Local Employment Service Men at Meet in Capitol

Four men represented the Salem office of the state employment service this week at an area training meeting in the state capitol, concerned with new aspects of disqualification of applicants and the detection of fraud.
