Silver Fish Season Opens In Valley

It may be a little late in the season for most fish, but it's just the right time to angle for silverfish. And you won't have to drag out your fishing tackle to do it either.

This household pest, extension entomologists tell us, begins to work up a bigger appetite just as soon as furnaces are fired to provide constant even heat during fall and winter months. Winter-heated homes also provide most favorable conditions for silverfish reproduction. With the advent of furnaces into many farm homes, silverfish have also increased in rural areas.

"Silverfish and their close kin, the fire brats, are pretty well distributed throughout the state. Since they come out only at night to eat, many householders may not know they are boarding a colony, or even what they look like. Pest Likes Warmth

These pests are slender, silver-gray, wingless, scale-covered, and fire brats, although about the same size and general appearance, are mottled gray in color and are more apt to be found in very warm places. They move very quickly for cover when exposed. Crevices in the old-fashioned bake ovens used to be infested with them and gave rise to the name fire brat. Chimneys of fireplaces also provide conditions to their liking. Kitchens, pantries, basements, attics, and all other parts of a house may be infested by both.

New Berry Reported By Corvallis Growers

Nurserymen and berry growers in and around Corvallis plan to offer the market a tempting new berry within the next few years. The new fruit is a truly black blackberry, the result of a cross between the black loganberry and the youngberry. It is a little smaller than the youngberry, does not taper to a point, but is full size for the full length, and is jet black when ripe.

It was developed at the state college and is known as selection No. 609, not yet having been named. The college men expect it to be a highly successful commercial product for shipment to eastern states.

At Corvallis this berry has yielded four and a half to five tons per acre without irrigation.

FARM IMPROVEMENTS ARE THRIFTY...

Farm improvements are practical investments. The dividends they bring in increased efficiency to your farm are well worth the initial expense. Check your farm to see where new methods or improvements would save you money.

If your barn needs paint or new equipment, if you want a new silo or milk house—if you need almost any permanent improvements, First National shows you the convenient way to pay for it.

With a First National Thrifty-Pay loan, you can take as long as three years to pay for farm improvements, with no down payment needed. Your building supply dealer can arrange a Thrifty-Pay loan for you. Or see your nearest branch of the First National Bank.

ACTIONS SPEAK LOUDER THEN WORDS.
What this country needs is less talk about lowering prices and more ACTION: when we buy livestock at lower cost, we immediately drop our prices. Right now we are offering a large variety of meat cuts at prices reduced substantially below the prices of a few weeks ago--and will continue to do so wherever and whenever possible. That's the kind of ACTION that means SAVINGS.
