Don't Look Now...

But... anyway right now mamma will know where to look for pappa when he turns up missing during a shopping trip—he'll be standing with mouth open in front of the electric train display.

You pay your money... and you take your choice. They are making a lot of this business of keeping lipstick on, as they say "your lips instead of his." One bit of advertising copy says the wrong way is to make up your lips in public, the right way is to use drinking straws so you won't have to make up often. One expert says put on powder first, lipstick later and follow up with more powder. Then the manufacturer of the new "Lip stay" says just put that on, and keep your rosey lips all day and evening. It's all so confusing.

What is this, anyway? ... Today I got two notable pieces of mail, first a beautiful pamphlet on matched pipe sets and this afternoon of communication from the cigar institute of America. We are trying very hard today, to choose which would be most becoming to our style when harping out of our mouth, a matched set of pipes, or a cigar.

Stick to it... If all the people who complain about Oregon weather would take themselves seriously, Oregon would be a large expanse of uninhabited country instead of a state filled with happy, healthy, wealthy and complaining people.

Easy does it... Picturing in our mind's eye, the proverbial overworked housewife, bending over a hot stove for hours preparing the annual Thanksgiving dinner, we consider our own experience this year. The turkey was stuffed last week, when we had plenty of time, and was put into the frozen food locker to keep until removed on Wednesday night. We set the table that evening. Thanksgiving morning the turkey went into the regulated oven and was promptly forgotten for half a dozen hours. We worked all morning at the office with plenty of time left for what little had to be done at home. Other family members brought salad, vegetables, relishes and dessert. With no tins in the kitchen, plenty of women to clear up and wash half the dishes while the main meal was being cleared, dishwashing was nothing. Not only did we dine with a maximum of ease, but the Bendix did the washing for one sister-in-law while we were eating! ... Maxine Buren.
