Bearcats in Opener Tonight

Lewis Cagers Face Oregon Staters at Corvallis

LEWIS CAGERS 3-18-1 Coach Johnny Lewis' Willamette Bearcat basketballers go postward for their seasonal inaugural tonight at Corvallis, facing the potent Oregon State Beavers, defending champions of the Coast conference, at 8 o'clock. The Staters will be heavily favored to snatch the win in the annual scrap, but the Bearcats might find them vulnerable for an upset. It will be OSC's fourth game in five nights, Coach Slats Gill's gang having played Portland U, Fee's Rollerdromers and

Linfield during the last four evenings. It will be the only game between the two teams as no date could be found on the Willamette home schedule for the Beavers this season.

Lewis has practically settled on a starting lineup of Bob Johnson and Bob Medley, forwards, Jim Johnson, center, and Fred Ihander and Tom Warren. guards. He may insert either Milt Baum, Don Waldron or Ted Johnson at a forward slot, Dale Bates or Bud Nelson at center and Bruce Barker or Roy Harrington at guard. At any rate, lack of height is expected to be costly to the Cats. Jim Johnson at center is the tallest player at when the main event mix with 6-2 level.

PORTSLIGHTNER

Oregon's Norm Van Brocklin goes down as one of the most proficient passers on the Coast for 1947 with his 939 yards in 168 attempts, for a .452 completion average. But let it not be overlooked that the key man in the Duck maneuverings for the campaign also was the conference's No. 1 punter. At 40.1 per boot, Van Brocklin was the only Coaster to top the 40yard average mark and beat out USC's Verl Lillywhite who compiled a 39.9 finale . . . Also noticeable in final PCC statistics is Don Samuel's name right beneath Van Brocklin's in the passing statistics. The Oregon Stater, with 51 completions in 91 attempts, for 520 yards, wound up second in the passing parade over such illustriously advertised pitchers as Southern Cal's George Murphy and Jim Powers . . . And after noting the California Bears as being the best PCC eleven in total defense for the season, their average per game surpassing considerably the marks registered by both USC and UCLA, we're wondering what Lynn (Pappy) Waldorf was really thinking when he moaned at the start of the season that his Bears "had the linemen, but not a good back in sight." Phooey! . . . To basketball: Long Island U Coach Clair Bee has yielded his annual "top twenty" college cage quints and picks the Kentucky Wildcats as the nation's best, with Notre Dame second. Washington Ore is liked for seventh place and Oregon for ninth. Nope, not a sign of OSC in the entire 20, to which Slats Gill will readily concur. This will looks to be anything but an Oregon State basketball year . . . Everyone along northern division row doesn't hesitate to point out Washington's Huskies, under new boss Art McLarney as the team to beat, and rate John Warren's Webfoots as the No. 2 finisher . . . To baseball, and a prediction: That if the new option rule isn't tabled during Har the Miami baseball pow-wow this week you'll see a much lower grade of Class B baseball in the Waters yard come summer. Players must perform sans financial help from a parent club, according to the new Mo law. So $400 and $500 a month ballgamers in a Class B league will be indeed rare birds from now on. Should the WIL step up a notch from the Class B to Class A category, however, the situation will be remedied. The Class A team salary limit per month is $4750, or $1150 more than allowed in Class B . . .

Football Ends Should Like Bowerman Plan

The Oregon Coaches association, that group including the state's prep football mentors will convene next weekend in Portland. During the conclave they will father methods by which the prep sports machinery might run more smoothly and will forward recommendations to the governing High School Activities Board of Control. One item which will be brought before the coaches by Bill Bowerman, energetic Medford athletic boss, will be extremely important. Particularly to those lads who now play end positions on prep football teams and who have had knees encased in braces and casts as a result of being mowed down by enemy blockers.

Not that ends should be immune to being blocked. But there is one method which has become downright dangerous, not only to a kid's prep athletic career, but to his entire normal life as well. It is the one in which a flanker, playing wide, comes booming back toward the line as the ball is put in play and, with all his added momentum smashes into the knee section of the opposing end who is charging across the line of scrimmage. Sometimes the flanker-blocker hits the end from the rear and is collared for clipping. But from the rear or side, the end takes a frightful physical pasting at the knee, which should be disallowed.

Players Subjected to Lifetime Injury

We have seen many blocks of this type in the past few years on prep gridirons, and right along with them have seen kids packed off the field with oft-times badly twisted knees. Some of those lads will have the wounded knees for life, which isn't a part of football. And still, after mentally sizing up the play situation, how is an end to avoid these vicious blocks and still carry out his assignment as a de-

Bowerman's suggestion to the coaches would be this: Make it unlawful for a player in flanker position to block an end, unless the flanker is in a stationary position not more than three yards wide of the end at the snap of the ball.

Which we believe is a timely suggestion. There are altogether too many high school football ends being crippled up at the knees-the greatest majority of serious injuries these days are befalling endsand these vicious blocks by high-geared flankers are causing it in

Joe Respects Walcott

POMPTON LAKES, N. J., Dec. 1 -(A)- Although it is not obvious to the naked eye, Heavyweight Champion Joe Louis concedes that he is easier to hit than he was 10 years ago-doesn't seem to be able to slip a punch quite the way he did in his youth.

"I think I hit as hard as when I won the title 10 years ago from Jim Braddock," he said today, "but I think I have slowed down in blocking punches. I get hit now with punches I used to be able to get away from."

Joe brought up the point in discussing the hitting prowess of Jersey Joe Walcott, the slightly shopworn negro challenger whom he meets in the 24th defense of his title Friday night at the Garden. What Louis had to say of his opponent was about the nicest he has uttered to date about the father of six children.

"I regard Jersey Joe as a dangerous puncher," he said without a trace of a smile. "You got to have respect in that ring for any man who can punch. I don't think he's as good a boxer as Billy Conn and Tommy Farr were, but they couldn't hit the way he does, either.

"You got to be on the lookout with him. I've seen him fight a couple of times and he sneaks those punches in pretty good." Jersey Joe's hitting prowess had not previously been suspected. Certainly the betting fraternity which has made Walcott an 8to-1 underdog is unaware of the dynamite in the challenger's fists.
