More About Burns Fish Fry

A few days ago the editor's personal column was devoted ered dish fellowship dinner. After to a "revival" of Dallas Lore Sharp's "From Bend to Burns." It attracted the interest of the Bend Bulletin, whose editor, Line for St. Luke" by Lorensen, Robert W. Sawyer, with customary diligence proceeded to dig will be given by the Junior Pilup the "local angles." He asked Julian Byrd, veteran editor of grim Fellowship. The church is the Burns Times-Herald, for a copy of the news report of the food for people of this vicinity Sharp-Finley visit to Burns in July 1912. The Bulletin then who are in need at Christmas, and publishes the following:

The day on which the trout fry reached Burns (Sunday) was July 14. That means that they came in on the train to Bend on the 13th and with that clue we went to our own files to see what we might find there regarding this episode. There was nothing; no mention of the shipment to Burns, no mention of Dallas Lore Sharp. We did find an announcement in the paper of the 24th that Game Warden Finley would meet with "the sportsmen of this vicinity to discuss matters of interest" but there was no meeting for the paper of the following week reported that Finley was called away. Presumably he was then returning from Burns.

Apparently the trout fry for Burns were not the only ones that came to Bend on July 13. In the Bulletin for July 17 there was a story about J. G. Redmond and Chester Hollinshead, representatives of the Lapine Commercial club, being in Bend on the 13th "to receive a million trout fry which State Game Warden Finley sent in to be placed in Paulina and East lakes." So there is where all the Nedberry crater fishing had its beginning. The fact has doubtless been recorded in our "Bend's Yesterdays" column but never, we are sure, in relation to this Silvies river planting with which it was associated.

Last week's printing of the Sprague column brought an echo from the past to Mrs. Horace Brookings. In 1912 the Brookings family was living on the family homestead at what is now Hampton, half way to Burns. The day-long trip to Burns was broken by travellers by a stop there for one of Mrs. Brookings' fine meals. Mrs. Brookings has called us up to say that she remembers the Finley-Sharp party. She reports, also, that H. G. Ferris, of whom we spoke the other day as having driven the truck carrying the fish, is now living (or was a year ago) at Sileam Springs, Arkansas. That's an item for the 30-year club.

And here is what Julian Byrd has sent us: "The young trout fry which the Harney County Rod club had shipped in by the state game warden were received last Sunday afternoon and liberated in Silvies river. It had been the intention and desire of the club to have these fish distributed in several streams in the county, but when they arrived it was thought best to have them liberated as soon as possible as the weather was very warm and they had been brought such a distance it was feared the loss would be entirely too great to take them any distance before being liberated.

"State Game Warden Finley came in to personally see the result of the long haul and make observations as to local conditions. He showed a great interest in the game of this section and was particularly pleased at the enthusiasm displayed by local people and their desire to assist in the work. He would not allow the club to pay the expenses of the shipment as it was not all he desired and suggested the fund the club had set aside for the purpose be used in a different way. While here Mr. Finley arranged to have something over 20,000 eggs to be shipped in from Strawberry lake and establish a small hatchery on the little stream leading down from R. K. McKinnon's place under the immediate supervision of the club. Mr. Finley will send a man in with the eggs to establish the hatchery and start it off.

"Mr. Finley was so well pleased with the spirit of coopera-tion by the people in general of this section that he will make special effort to assist in bringing in more fish and game. The club has been promised at least two dozen pairs of Chinese pheasants this fall to be liberated in the adjacent territory where farmers have promised cooperation and protection for a time. While the shipment of trout was not altogether satisfactory, the loss being some greater than had been anticipated, all concerned are very well satisfied at it brought the people of this territory in closer touch with the objects and aims of the state game commission and stimulates an interest that will be far-reaching in the future. It means better protection for the game and fish, as MreFinley impressed all with whom he talked of the great benefit of proper protection and the value of keeping the game from absolute extermination. The eggs to be shipped will arrive in a few days and the best of care taken of them, with Mr. Finley guaranteeing 90 per cent.

"Mr. Finley is accompanied on the trip by Dallas Lore Sharp, one of the foremost nature writers of the United States. He is an author of much note, writing not only books but contributing to many magazines. Mr. Sharp will spend some time in the game portions of the state with Mr. Finley and gather material for later stories. His visit will bring more publicity to Harney county and to a class of readers that have not heretofore known of the sportsman's paradise hidden away in the great Central Oregon.

"Mr. Finley and Mr. Sharp met with the Rod and Gun club at Tonawama last Tuesday evening and gave addresses. It was an open meeting, attended by many who were not members. The warden outlined the plans of the state game commission and asked the people of this section to submit such changes of the game laws as they considered should be made. He said the commission wanted to amend the laws and make them as uniform as practicable, at the same time giving proper protection that the game may be preserved. "Mr. Sharp stated in his address that this was the most interesting spot in the world to him. He was most enthusiastic and promised to visit this section again in the near future, bringing a car load of eastern people with him. They have gone to the lakes to study the birds and will go from there to the P Ranch, Steens Mountain and on to Warner lake and out by way of Crater lake. They will spend some time in the interior."

Emergency and Permanent Aid

The emergency aid bill passed the house of representatives Europe until the line marking the KNIGHT MEMORIAL CONG. with numerous changes from the senate version. The total is western edge of Russia's zone of White, pastor, Sunday school 9:48 a.m. reduced by $7,000,000 and the $590,000,000 authorized earmarks $60,000,000 for China. Various amendments were adopted, probably the most important of which is one requiring a reserve of 150,000,000 bushels of wheat July 1st next unless the estimate of winter wheat production exceeds 700,000,000 bushels. GRIN AND BEAR IT Another amendment directs government agencies to sell abroad for relief purposes food surpluses acquired in support of markets.

The two measures will now go to a conference committee, and if experience in the first session is a guide the bill finally adopted will resemble more nearly the senate draft.

The debate on the stop-gap relief bill has naturally embraced the Marshall plan, and it is evident that the opposition to the bills for long-time aid will be much stronger than for the bill just passed. However our country is now so deeply involved that it must go ahead with the Marshall plan on a

The crisis countries like France and Italy are putting their faith in the United States. The communist demonstrations in these countries have been directed largely against the U. S. program. In stubbornly resisting the communist threat the governments of these countries have relied on assurances of American aid. The peoples of the countries have been moved to reject the pressures of communists by the attractiveness of the rehabilitation program embraced in the recovery plan. They hope with American assistance to solve their economic problems and provide political stability.

The United States is thus driven by developing events to implement the program, or else its prestige will be ruined abroad, the supporters of the democratic idea will be overwhelmed and the ensuing economic chaos will surely engulf prosperous America.

Congress should proceed to study the long-range plan intelligently, without prejudice, and seek to provide assistance which will really be restorative to Europe.

Moletov took an hour of the foreign ministers' conference to heap insults and abuse on the western powers. He seems to be a phonograph with only one record, which he repeats over and over again. Small wonder Bevin and Marshall find their patience taxed listening to his diatribes.
