Monmouth Property Cleared
For New College Building

By Benlah Craven
Statesman Correspondent
MONMOUTH—A block of land adjacent to the campus of Oregon College of Education recently underwent a bulldozer clean-up, after huge piles of brush and refuse had been burned. This valued piece of property lies south of the college administration building and will be the site of the next new campus building.

Less than three years ago the house which had stood three-quarters of a century on the corner of North Monmouth avenue at Jackson street was razed because of its aged, dilapidated condition. It was one of the largest, privately owned dwellings in Monmouth and was built by Mr. and Mrs. David Stump, early pioneers of this section. The grounds had been kept throughout the years in a natural, informal arrangement of trees and shrub growth, which in many places had grown into dense thickets due to lack of pruning. All sorts of bulb perennials flowered in the grass, giving the yard, especially in springtime, a "back-to-the-woods" appearance of unsophisticated charm. Beautiful trees, standing thickly, have been pruned, and matted blackberry vines cut out. A row of lilac interwoven like a hedge, were planted there long ago by Miss Cassie Stump, in memory of a similar arrangement on the campus of Wellesley college where she was a student in her youth.

Residents Interesting
Many interesting personalities have dwelt in the rambling old house, with its 20 rooms, three stories and three stairways. The late John B. Stump, who imported the first registered Jersey cattle to Polk county and was also a pioneer in raising registered Lincoln sheep here. He was the son of the David Stumps. He married Molly Coad of Dallas and their first home was the old family dwelling in Monmouth.

Thomas F. Campbell, one of the early president of Christian college (now Oregon College of Education), married Mary Ann Stump and the campus map this house their home. Their son, David S. Campbell, Portland pianist, spent his early life here.

Prince L. Campbell, son of Thomas F. Campbell by a former marriage, also became president of the Monmouth college, later going to the University of Oregon as its president. He resided in the Stump-Campbell house in his youth.

Miss Cassie Stump, sister of John B. Stump and Mrs. Thomas F. Campbell, lived most of her 85 years in this house. Miss Stump, an active social and civic worker here during her long lifetime, took time out to accompany her nephew David Campbell and niece Agnes Campbell to Berlin where they studied art and music for several years, and then returned to Monmouth and the old home. At Miss Stump's death, the house and grounds passed, by inheritance, to Agnes Campbell, who had the house razed. Recently the land came into possession of O. C. E. One of the most beautiful building sites in town, it is particularly well situated for college acquisition because of its adjoining location.

House Where U. S. Grant Slept Gets New Paint Job

PEDEE—William Condon is re-roofing his farm residence located on a portion of the Col. Cornelius Gilliam donation land claim. Colonel Gilliam came to Oregon in 1844 from South Carolina and named the creek running through his farm Pedee after the river near his old home, Pedee river in Carolina. The house which was moved to its present site by Marcus Gilliam was the headquarters of General Grant and General Phil Sheridan, one winter when they were in charge of the Siletz Indians at Fort Hoskins, possibly the winter of 1846. Colonel Gilliam lost his life in the Cayuse Indian war in 1848. Condon purchased the farm from W. Frank Gilliam in 1928.

New Floor Finishes To Be Linn's Project

ALBANY—During January, unit extension members will learn about "New Floor and Wall Finishes" from their project leaders. Twenty-six of the 27 units sent project leaders to the training meetings in Albany, December 18 and 19.

Viola Hansen, Linn home demonstration agent, instructed the leaders in the use of penetrating floor seal as permanent floor finish which any homemaker can apply, and is easy to keep up as well as easy to repair. Each set of leaders finished a small piece of wood in learning the process and use.

The use of texture painting in Wall Finishes was demonstrated by Miss Hansen. Samples of the latest trends in wall papers were also discussed.

The project leaders will present this meeting to their unit members during the month of January. During the same month Viola Hansen, Linn County Home Demonstration Agent will have charge of the Clothing Workshops.
