Baldock Cites Reasons for Deduction Ban

The recent action of the state highway commission in refusing to permit payroll deductions for members of the Oregon State Employees association, covering the association's life insurance program, was due to the fact that only association members working for the commission would be benefited, State Highway Engineer R. H. Baldock declared Thursday.

Baldock's explanation was in reply to a charge by association officials here Wednesday that the action of the commission would tend to deprive highway department employees of low cost insurance protection for their families.

Under the association request, Baldock said, many highway department employees who are not members of the association would not have received any benefits had the deduction been approved.

Association officials said they would ask the commission to reconsider its previous action.

Old Ad May Still Be Valid, Due to Floods

"The most direct, comfortable and cheapest route from Oregon to San Francisco" was by rail to Roseburg, stage to Coos Bay and steamer to San Francisco, according to an advertisement of Nov. 18, 1873.

The notice, publicizing the Pioneer Stage line over the 64-mile Coos Bay Wagon road, appeared in the Mercury, a Salem newspaper of the time. Its discovery Thursday was only by chance, since it was on the reverse of a legal notice, among those being microfilmed in the Marion county clerk's office by Mrs. Althea Pressnell.

The legal notice was in connection with the estate of A. F. Waller, pioneer minister and builder of Waller hall, oldest building on the Willamette university campus.

The stage line advertised "40 hours or less from Coos Bay to San Francisco" via the "new and fast steamer Eastport." The route, it said, enabled avoidance of "the rough road of about 300 miles between Roseburg and Redding."

The Coos Bay Wagon road was claimed to be unsurpassed by any road in the state. The railroad involved south to Roseburg was the old Oregon and California.

Job Referrals Pay Dividends

Of 9,271 persons referred to jobs during 1947 by the Salem office of the state employment service, nearly half, or 4,320, were hired, Manager William H. Baillie said Thursday. The local office recorded 124,583 referrals, persons reporting there for claims or work, including 40,184 veterans.

New applications for jobs totaled 5,129, including 1,630 by war veterans, of whom 219 were physically handicapped. Orders from employers for jobs, not seasonal, totaled 9,200. Referrals included 227 handicapped persons, of whom 92 were employed. Veterans hired number 1,374.

The local office, which handled the year's work with an average crew of 18 persons, expects to double the 1947 load during the coming year because of the state's assuming the farm job placement service previously conducted by the federal government.

Optimist Club Lunch Today

Several Salem men interested in boys' work are meeting for luncheon in Marion hotel this noon to discuss possible formation of a local chapter of Optimist International, a service organization for boys' work in support of existing boys' groups and of new youth groups where none are already formed.

Glenn W. Loomis, extension counselor of the Optimist organization with offices in Portland, said he would meet with the local group including Howard Higby, Lyle Leighton, Jerry Scott, E. J. Kelm, G. O. Madison, D. A. Wright, W. M. Hamilton, Warren Doolittle, Carl P. Richards, Floyd Colburn and others.

POLE LINES APPROVED
Marion county court granted Thursday to Portland General Electric company permits to install electric power pole lines at four places: For 19.99 chains along an unnamed road in Reimann addition at Hayesville, for 2,000 feet along an unnamed road running east from the Pacific highway at Brooks, for 8,100 feet along a series of three roads in the Swegle district and for 550 feet along Bartlett drive south of Salem.
