

'Unclaimed' Iranian Girl Awaits Oregon Sweetheart at Ellis Isle

PORTLAND, Ore., Jan. 9-(AP)—The love saga of Soghra, who came halfway around the world for her ex-GI, is nearing its romantic ending. Soghra Lavassani met the GI, William Patrick Cody, 29, of Forest Grove, Ore., in Teheran, Iran. For the year-and-a-half since he was sent home for discharge, Cody attempted unsuccessfully to get his sweetheart to this country. Discouraged, he finally set out to work his way to San Diego in hopes of signing aboard a ship to Iran.

Then a telegram arrived from New York. Soghra had landed at Ellis Island December 9, and would Cody please come to claim her?

But Cody could not be found. The last word was that he had worked as a chef at a Huron, Calif., cafe. His mother feared he already had slipped out. Attempts to trace him were without success. Immigration officials said they would have to send Soghra home if he did not turn up soon.

Tonight a letter reached Cody's mother. He was working at a Calif. Prompts she sent a telegram, telling him that Soghra was waiting at Ellis Island.

All that remains now is for Cody to post $500 bond, pay $50 customs charges, sign a few papers and the two will be reunited.

Discussion of Water Control District Held

HAZEL DELL, Jan. 9— Seventy-five landowners of this area met at the school house here tonight to discuss the proposed formation of a Pudding river irrigation and drainage district.

Chairman Manton A. Carl, Hubbard rancher, stated during the meeting that in his opinion the landowners within the district are in favor of cleaning debris from the Pudding river but most are not in favor of the irrigation and drainage project as authorized by the signing of petitions in the area. It was brought out during the meeting that most of the farmers who signed the petitions did not understand that they were authorizing the setting up of a drainage and irrigation district, but rather a project to clear debris from the river.

Henry Euren, Salem, explained the state law which authorizes the formation of river irrigation and drainage districts. Other similar meetings are to be held January 14 at the Central Howell school and January 15 at Bethany school. Euren announced that interested are invited to attend.
