Which College for Boy or Girl?

At the end of every fall term many educational institutions are forced to flunk out hopeful freshmen who simply did not belong in college in the first place or who enrolled in the "wrong" school. Today's overcrowded campuses cannot support unnecessary deadweight.

The heartache, disillusionment and expense of such mistaken ollments could be avoided.

Choosing a college to attend is sometimes like picking a morning service, 11 a.m. Message by Dr. E. W. Petticord. Evening service, The heartache, disillusionment and expense of such mistaken enrollments could be avoided.

bangtail from a racing form-some people just close their eyes and count eeny-meeny-miny-mo.

Educators don't approve of that system.

They realize that too many high school students decide upon colleges with little regard for germane factors which may have long range effects on their careers, Too many youngsters are influenced by irrelevancies like football records, fraternal affiliations and social opportunities . . . or by biased parents or friends.

Dependence on incidental information, press-agent propaganda or coercion is no longer excusable. Teenagers now have the most complete and impartial source of information ever published to help them decide. This 210-page book, "Mapping Your Education" (James, Kerns & Abbott, Portland, 1947), is available to all high schools at no cost. It is a cooperative project of the Interstate Committee on High School-College Relations repsenting the 14 colleges and universities in Oregon and 16 institutions in Washington.

The first section of the book discusses career planning, desirability of college training, "education" and "schooling," choosing the "right" school. The second part includes fairly uniform accounts of the requirements, facilities and available courses at 30 northwest schools.

It is interesting to note that there are a dozen colleges and universities within a 70-mile radius of Salem. Tuition costs range from $10 per term to $225 per semester and the diversity of courses available and opportunities for extra-curricular activity adult classes. Morning service, 11 a.m. Also—Junior church and church-time is equally wide.

All of which should encourage high school students to play the field . . . and to minimize the gamble in education. Otherwise, they might very well get lost in the annual December shuffle.

Subsidies to Metal Mines

Ganging up for revival of subsidies for metal mines are members of congress from many western states. They are well entrenched in the public lands committee and will use this vantage point to log roll through congress their special interest legislation.

It is recalled that during the war subsidies were granted to

It is recalled that during the war subsidies were granted to high-cost producers of metals such as copper and lead to keep them producing metals for the war. That legislation expired with ending of the war and has not been renewed. Now the mineners and their political friends are thinking up ways of drainmore pap from the public treasury.

piling. It will be urged that the government should have big KSLM Saturday, 5:45 p.m. heaps of metals in store against a possible war. The way to get the heaps is to pay bonuses above existing high metal prices

This is one place where we hope economy-minded republicans will lower the boom. We should get away from government subsidies and let free enterprise have its rein. In event of emergency we should be able to get supplies from other countries, since we have undisputed control of the oceans.

The country should know that there are parts of the west not interested in metal mining subsidies, and Oregon is one of Railroads, like newspapers, don't come in for many plaudits but one now seems due the Southern Pacific. Certainly without profit and probably at considerable loss the SP made passenger service available across the Willamette when flood waters closed the West Salem bridge. It was a friendly gesture and a distinct accommodation to hundreds of people. The set-up was arranged by J. A. Ormandy, general passenger agent; C. P. Hopkins, division superintendent, and Karl DeMarais, travelling passenger agent. The latter was actively in charge. We are hopeful that some day our almost-annual emergency will be a thing of the past, but in the meantime we are appreciative of the help accorded us.

A Budapest newspaper reports that five old master paintings were taken from an uninhabitated castle in Hungary, boiled p.m. Church p.m. Bible study. in water to get rid of the paint, and then the canvases were cut up for the uppers of shoes. Four were Titians, one by Velasquez.

This news will be shocking to art-lovers; but it illustrates the grimness of poverty in that part of Europe. People do not destroy fine paintings wantonly, but lack of such common material as heavy cloth evidently drove these people to seizing the old masters. The painting, which gave them enormous value, wasn't wanted for shoes, just the stout canvas. But just think of walking about shod in the priceless canvas of a Titian or Velasquez!

The Deschutes Geology club spent a meeting with a study of petrified woods. Cross sections of specimens were examined in the attempt to identify the original species. Which suggests the idea that people are woefully ignorant of living trees and shrubs. Some people can't tell a cedar tree from a fir, or an alder from a maple.

markups. The coincidence of a large corporation and a small labor union standing out against the trend and going for a low price and a lower wage is purely accidental, yet the fact confirms the idea of a dual responsibility. While the controversy of whether prices rise because wages rise or wages day rise because of higher prices is 11 as far from settlement as the old debate of which comes first, the hen or the egg, it is a fair approximation of truth to say the causes and effects are interlocking. Neither can put the blame for inflation wholly on the other. for inflation wholly on the other. Wages, however, are far less fluid than prices. Eager as folk are for lower prices they have reason to fear if business really should hit the should hit the land the should hit the land skids. Then they would look back Confir now is that the ensuing reaction may not be as severe as the de-Missionary and evangelisti pression of the 1930s. WHAT IS THE SCOPE OF

Salem College and Acattemp

The school includes a four year high school course of high scholastic training, with two years of Junior College. The latter is designed to prepare students for further educational training or to fit them for specialized work in Christian and secular fields. Students enjoy wholseome social activities and an extensive physical training program. All students receive inspiration and instruction from Christian leaders whose teaching is based upon the premises:

"The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom: and the knowledge of the holy is understanding." - Prov. 9:10
