Sheepmen to Meet Today In Corvallis

The annual meeting of the Oregon Purebred Sheep Breeders will be held in Corvallis today, beginning at 1 p. m. in the Benton hotel.

The highlight of the meeting will be a talk by Julius Nordby, director of the Sheep Breeding experiment station of the United States department of agriculture at Dubois, Ida. Nordby will be on the afternoon program discussing important phases of the sheep breeding program as it affects Oregon and Washington sheep production.

E. F. Hubbard, president of the sheep breeders, calls attention to the facts that Oregon sheep population is down 63 per cent and that the sheep numbers of the state have moved west with Douglas county being the top sheep county in the state.

Another feature of the meeting will be a report of the pioneer sheep breeders memorial committee, concerning the erection of a memorial for pioneer sheep breeders of Oregon at the state fairgrounds. This committee is composed of Eldon Riddell of Monmouth, Claude Steusloff of Salem and C. M. Hubbard of Junction City.

The annual banquet will be at 6:30 with Norby the speaker.

Inspection of Meat Lax, Say Veterinarians

A need for strengthening Oregon laws on meat inspection was indicated Friday by veterinarians from several sections of the state who were in Salem attending a quarterly meeting of the Oregon State Veterinary Medical association.

Much of the discussion centered on recent reports of commercial slaughtering of tender calves — those generally under four weeks old and considered unfit for human consumption. Inspectors at slaughterhouses are handicapped in this respect, said Portland Meat Inspector E. E. Chase, because determination of the exact age is difficult.

Dr. C. C. Wilkie, chief of the federal bureau of animal industry meat inspection, recommended the state require both antemortem and post mortem inspection of animals slaughtered.

A draft of new inspection rules of the state agriculture department was presented by Drs. Charles F. Haynes and James K. Taylor of the department. Haynes was appointed to a committee of the association which will give further study to meat inspection regulations.

Civic Leaders to Confer with School Board on Expansion

By Winston H. Taylor
Staff Writer, The Statesman

Several local civic leaders will meet with the board of the Salem school district Monday night to go over the district's expansion plans which already have been given favorable study by the board itself and a group of outstanding Oregon educators.

At the meeting called for 8 p. m. in the public school office building, citizens will be informed of the $3,275,000 school district construction program as drafted by the board.

Educators from outside the district concur with the board in regarding an immediate building program "an absolute must," says Superintendent Frank B. Bennett. On the basis of birth rate alone, he said they felt that facilities must be provided for 4,000 elementary school pupils by 1953-54 and for 2,000 each in junior and senior high schools by 1955-56.

Experts Confer

Dr. Paul Jacobson, dean of the University of Oregon school of education; Dr. Carl Huffaker, professor of school administration at U. of O., and Lester Wilcox, assistant state superintendent of public instruction, have looked over the Salem system, the proposals for expansion, and have conferred with various directors. With a greatly increased birth rate reflected in the recent school census, elementary enrollments will grow steadily and rapidly for at least five years, but the secondary level will not be drastically affected for several years, Bennett reported.

Suggest Cafeterias

The educators agreed, said Bennett, that frame buildings like Grant and Liberty should not be expanded but should be employed until growth demands their replacement with larger structures; that Washington school is not a proper site for a replacement; that most of the other buildings are fit bases for additions. They also recommended that new construction should conform to modern educational design; that additions should conform to the parent structure; that remodeling should provide for covered play area and cafeteria, both able to double for such other use as auditorium.

The senior high school can hold its own for several years, it is anticipated, by addition of vocational shops and music rooms. Two new gymnasiums and a heating plant were constructed during the past year, as well as a shop and garage for all district buses.

Junior High Expansion

The pinch will not be immediate at the junior high level, but enrollment next fall is expected to be about 1,750, more than 50 above the present figure. A new gymnasium, a cafeteria and some large classrooms are proposed at Parrish, and a new building is planned for West Salem on a site already purchased.

For grade schools, the immediate need is enlargement of some existing schools (both city and suburban) by from one to six classrooms, plus play area, cafeteria and other facilities. Probably next on the list are new buildings at Four Corners (now served by Rickey) and in the Capitocut by the county before the accident and some construction had been started, to replace the span, but high water following the mishap washed away most of the supplies, it was reported.

The new structure will be built around the single-lane Bailey bridge borrowed from the state as an emergency measure for the crossing.

OLD AGE PENSIONERS, NOTICE

The American Pension Committee club will meet at the Mayflower hall on N. Capitol St. for a pot luck ham dinner to be served at 6:30 p. m. Sunday, Jan. 18th.

We invite all who are interested in a united effort by the members or past members of any and all pension groups or clubs; to have this Congress, now in this session, pass a federal old age pension bill with equal payments in all states. Bring a covered dish and join us there and after the feed, we will have a short business session and some entertainment after which we will be addressed by State Representative Joseph E. Harvey of Portland, Ore., who will give us a graphic picture of the old age pension affairs in Congress and in the field. Meet with us in this friendly consideration and social gathering. —Pd. Adv.
