The Woman Pays...

Jumping the gun on Leap year, January 16, Salem high school girls gave a down-on-the-farm-party, with hay and livestock very much in evidence for atmosphere. It was a matter of women's choice throughout the evening, with girls calling for boys, providing corsages and standing the treats. Blue jeans, shirt tails out, short skirts and sweaters were in high style.

Chosen girl "Most-likely-to-get-her-man" was Elsie Cannon and selected by popular vote as most "Likely-man-to-be-got," was Del Kleen, pictured in center with calf. Drawing oider from the kegs in the upper picture are Gordon Johnson and Doris Jean Shafer. In the lefthand picture Betty Brinkley assists her boy friend, John Erickson to his feet after asking him for a dance. On his shoulder is pinned an elegant vegetable corsage, which girls sent their "dates" before the dance.

Pinning the corsage of carrots, onions and garlic on the manly chest of her date, Bill Rock, is Prudence Craig.
