Workmen Clearing City Hall's Third Floor

Crowded office conditions of Salem's city government may be relieved when future funds are available to remodel the upper story of the city hall, shown above. The third floor was partitioned off into sleeping wards, kitchen and shower rooms during the depression to house and feed the hundreds of transients who passed through Salem seeking work. Although nothing is definite now, workmen are clearing the floor and tearing down the old partitions so that the space will be available for construction of offices and meeting rooms when final plans are made and funds available, according to City Manager J. L. Franzen. (Photo by Don Dill, Statesman staff photographer.)

Willamette U. Registration Totals 1,130

Willamette university's registration was all but completed yesterday with a total of 1,130 students registered for the spring term. Harold B. Jory, registrar, reported. Only unexpected arrivals of students and the dropping of others will change the present figure. Of the 1,130 students, 557 registered as lower classmen (freshmen and sophomores) and 573 as upper classmen, in the liberal arts college. The law school signed 102 students, the music school 76. Eighteen other students, 11 of them taking special music courses and seven taking special courses, completed the registration roll. This spring's enrollment was approximately 100 less than last fall's high of 1,235. Drops and an enrollment had taken a corresponding drop from last fall's 570 to 520 this week. Of the 520 veterans and those on returnee status, 15 are women.

advisor, announced that the veteran-graduation accounted for most of the difference despite the addition to 520 this week. Of the 520 veterans and those on returnee status, 15 are women.
