

Stassen Asks Dewey to Talk On Policies

Oregon's second presidential candidate for nomination, Harold E. Stassen of Minnesota, Saturday invited the first aspirant, Thomas E. Dewey of New York, to join with him to discuss party policies on national issues, before the public. He urged the talk in order that the republican party which "has the best chance of a victory over the Truman administration next November" will be of greatest service to the people.

His telegram read as follows: On this day I am entering the Oregon primary in which, with your approval, your name has also been entered. I believe that our republican party has the best chance of a victory over the Truman administration next November. I believe that the people of Oregon are entitled to the best of the republican party. I believe that the people of Oregon are entitled to the best of the republican party. I believe that the people of Oregon are entitled to the best of the republican party.
