Inside the Nazi Mind

The diaries of Dr. Paul Joseph Goebbels, Hitler's psychotic propaganda minister, are being published. His secret confessions may have been good for Goebbels' soul but their significance to the student of history is doubtful. Who can say whether or not his warped mind, so conditioned to lying, told itself the truth?

The only nazi memoirs worth reading, according to H. R. Trevor-Roper, author of the "Last Days of Hitler," in the New York Times, will be those Albert Speer writes at Spandau prison where he is serving 20 years for war crimes.

For Albert Speer, whose philosophy, the philosophy of so many Germans, made nazism possible, is the real nazi criminal, Trevor-Roper says. While other prisoners admitted "war guilt" in a vague, impersonal way, Speer is the only one who pleaded personally guilty. No buffoon like Goering, or mystic like Hitler, or brutal fanatic like Goebbels, Speer was the industrial bureaucrat who made totalitarianism work when Hitler only huffed and Goering puffed and Goebbels made excuses.

Trevor-Roper, who interviewed the man, says that, like Goebbels, Speer was capable of thought, but, unlike Goebbels, Speer was intellectually honest. How, then, could this man who never belonged to the nazi party remain loyal to Hitler?

This, the historian explains, is the enigma of the German personality:

As economic dictator, Speer, "the ablest constructive genius in Germany," created total war and "placed his economic empire at the disposal of the bloodiest tyrant in the world" because the ultimate purpose of his work seemed irrelevant. "He hoped to achieve great practical results; and if a politician gave him a large field in which to exercise his genius, he judged that politician not by his politics but by the opportunities that he gave."

Such pragmatic thinking was common to a great many Germans, Trevor-Roper says. It made the development and acceptance of nazism possible. It makes Speer and the German masses the "real war criminals." And it places Hitler and his stooges in a class by themselves—a class which would include Kant, Hegel and Spinoza whose philosophies inspired the false nazi dialectic.

Therefore, those interested in the workings of the nazi mind, the mental makeup of producers of war criminals, should read 18th century German philosophers rather than the confidances of a madman.

New Utilities Commissioner

On Monday next John H. Carkin will succeed George H. Flagg as public utilities commissioner for Oregon. Flagg, who discharged the duties of the office competently, has resigned to run for secretary of state; but the office will be in able hands with Carkin in charge.

The character of the work of the department of public utilities has changed greatly in late years. Rare are the formal cases to fix valuation, that always elusive figure in a rate case. In fact there are not many general rate cases any more, the telephone case being the first big rate case for many years. For one thing valuations are fairly well established; and there is general recognition that utilities have to have a living wage to render the service the public requires.

But the department has to police the utilities, watch records of earnings, check on complaints, and sometimes police competition. It renders its best service to the public by its vigilance in patrol. If it makes few "arrests" that is to its credit—it has been able to effect settlements without resort to official "orders."

Carkin has been head of the railroad section of the department. The state's authority in this field is pretty well restricted by federal regulation; but Carkin has worked to protect Oregon interests, such as shippers of lumber, livestock, wheat, etc., so they may not suffer discriminations in the framing of rates.

An attorney by profession, with many years of service as member of the tax commission, Carkin is well qualified by education and experience in public affairs to serve the state in this important capacity. He is judicious and honorable, with a fine sense of public responsibility. Governor Hall made a good selection when the Flagg resignation forced him to pick a new utilities commissioner.

Now Showing: Ivan the Terrible

On the heels of Charlie Chaplin's classic satire, "The Great Dictator," Hollywood released a string of anti-axis films during the last war. Some of them were exceptionally well-done; most of them were propaganda designed to stir up public indignation, inspire defense workers and sell war bonds.

Apparently, Hollywood is at it again. First it was the ax for Fritz; now Ivan (depicted as a good buddy during the war) is in for a colossal pounding, in technicolor, no doubt.

Twentieth Century-Fox is producing a picture called "The Iron Curtain," with Dana Andrews, June Havoc and Gene Tierney. The National Council of American-Soviet Friendship wants to prevent the release of this film on grounds that it is anti-Soviet propaganda. The picture, the council claims, is based on the Russian spy trials in Canada and the events portrayed have little or no relation to the facts; it is merely an attempt to buy off the un-American affairs committee which raised a stink with Hollywood Reds last year.

The opposition of a pro-communist group sometimes can be taken as a recommendation of merit. Maybe the council objects because the movie is only too true . . .

Nevertheless, the protest affords Hollywood an opportunity to take stock of whatever plans it may have to screen anti-Russian films.

Motion pictures are a powerful opinion-forming medium of mass communication. As such they must recognize the same responsibility to the public borne by a free press and radio. Scenarios based on actual happenings should not be guilty of bad "fictional reporting"—that is, slanted interpretation of facts to sway the public to a preconceived viewpoint.

When, as Secretary Marshall pointed out, "the world is in the midst of a great crisis, inflamed by propaganda, misunderstanding, anger and fear," it is wrong and unjustified for the press, the radio and the motion pictures to add, by calculated propaganda, to that misunderstanding, anger and fear.

In California the bees are making peppermint flavored (or other flavors, too) honey in various shades to match the flavors. Elsewhere birds are making nests out of fiberglass and other progressive building materials . . . What ails the gentle, contented cows? We got to put chocolate in the milk, yet!

Twelve years ago when Minnie McCormick tried to find financial backing for her uranium mine in Wyoming "everyone thought a working woman like me was crazy." So she kept on working—cooking for a band of roving sheep shearers. But there were some changes made after Hiroshima and she's still got her claim on a multi-million dollar field of concentrated uranium—that stuff people are going crazy trying to get.

80 Per Cent Of Camp Adair Acreage Sold

The job of disposing government-owned Camp Adair land is approximately 80 per cent completed, T. F. Whiteman, project manager and liquidator of the camp property told the Salem Board of Realtors Friday noon.

Whiteman is employed by the federal land bank of Spokane, Wash., which is selling the Adair land for the government under the auspices of the war assets administration. The speaker outlined the steps, regulations and priorities involved in disposing the property.

The entire Camp Adair lands equal approximately 52,000 acres in size and selling them began in 1947. They were first acquired by the government from private owners during the war years.

Whiteman said that the state was interested in purchasing approximately 6,600 acres of the surplus lands for Oregon State college and has also indicated interest in parts of the 2,000-acre cantonment area for use by wildlife preservation programs.

The speaker told the board that all lands which are not sold through regular priority channels within a few months will be grouped into tracts for sale to all comers without restrictions or priorities.

DC-6 Flights To Resume

Air passenger service by modified and improved Douglas DC-6 planes will be resumed this month over the nation, according to word received Friday by H. F. Sweeney, station manager for United Air Lines in Salem.

DC-6 flights were suspended voluntarily by airline operators last November after a major accident and an emergency landing involving two of the big 300-mile-an-hour luxury planes.

Sweeney said United's DC-6 planes will be back in service on March 21 on the San Francisco to Honolulu run and April 1 on the coast-to-coast U.S. route. American Airlines will resume DC-6 service March 16 and National Airlines March 20, Sweeney said.

Information received from UAL's news bureau stated the investigation following the accidents had resulted in many modifications, but no major structural change, in the DC-6 design.

Credit Group Hears Kaye

Tighter credit regulations in most businesses make necessary close cooperation between sales and credit department, George R. Kaye, Willamette Valley district manager of the Union Oil company, told members of the Salem Credit association at a luncheon Friday.

Kaye pointed out that a sale is not complete until the money is in the cash register. "There is too often undue emphasis placed on sales volume and little or no effort made to determine the customer's ability to pay."

4 WU Freshmen Win Class Offices

Four Willamette university freshmen were elected to class offices this week in a re-vote.

Frank Washburn, Portland, was elected to the post of vice president; Martha DuRette, Gervais, secretary; Elliott Motschenbacher, Roseburg, treasurer, and Burnell Ambrose, Portland, sergeant-at-arms.

Jack Gunn, Monmouth, is president as result of an earlier election.

Traffic Death Rate Declines in State

Oregon's traffic death rate set a low January record in January, with only 26 deaths resulting from accidents in 350,000,000 miles of highway travel, announced Secretary of State Earl T. Newbry Friday.

The death rate for the month was 7.3 per 100,000,000 comparing with 12.9 rate of the year before and with the rate of 8.4 for the year 1947. Newbry pointed out, however, that Oregon is still far from meeting the national goal of 6 deaths per 100,000,000 miles of travel.

$10,000 Suit Results from Accident Death

A suit seeking to collect $10,000 for the death of Leah Rae Hibberd who died here in an auto accident early New Year's day in 1947, was filed in Marion county circuit court Friday.

Mrs. Hibberd, wife of William Stanley Hibberd, who is bringing the suit and mother of a young son, died as a result of injuries received when the car in which she was a passenger struck a tree in the 1400 block of South Commercial street.

The complaint is lodged against Robert Daniel McLauchlan, who, according to police records, was the driver of the automobile. McLauchlan is charged in the complaint with acting "in a grossly negligent manner," and with being "in a state of intoxication." McLauchlan incurred a broken leg and internal injuries in the accident.

Today's Children Overstimulated, Optimist Club Told

Over-stimulation is the downfall of children today, Dr. Horace Miller, psychiatrist at the Oregon state hospital, told members of the Salem Optimist club Friday at their noon luncheon-meeting in the Salem hotel.

Speaking on the subject Training of Youth," Dr. Miller said the problem of youth today is the child's strength, not his weakness. "We have been driving into youths what they should and should not do, and have caused overstimulation," he emphasized.

Parents should not try direct adjustments because they overstimulate children, Dr. Miller concluded. The Rev. Seth Huntington, pastor of the Salem First Congregational church, introduced the speaker. Dr. Miller answered questions pertaining to child training following his speech.

Gas Use Shows Seasonal Decline

Gasoline sales in Oregon dropped nearly 6,000,000 gallons in January, this year, when compared with December's high, but still was more than 2,500,000 gallons over the figure for January, 1947, Secretary of State Earl T. Newbry announced Friday. Total sales for January were 29,691,727 gallons on which taxes aggregated $1,484,-586. Refunds to non-highway users average approximately 12 per cent, Newbry said.

Ex-Chicago U. Dean to Teach Willamette Class

Willamette university announced Friday a special six-weeks course for economics and business administration students, opening Tuesday. Instructor will be Dr. Charles M. Thompson, retired dean of commerce at the University of Chicago, who was commencement speaker here last year. The class will meet Tuesday and Thursday afternoons, 1 to 2:30.

Ray Yocum to Manage Willamette Festival

Ray Yocom, Riverside, Ill., has been appointed by the Willamette university student council to manage the May weekend festivities this year. Yocum, a junior, has not as yet appointed his assistants.

First Christian Services Will Start Sunday

A pre-Easter emphasis upon evangelism will be carried out at the First Christian church with two weeks of preaching, beginning Sunday morning and continuing until Easter. The Rev. Ward A. Rice will be the evangelist, and will talk each night during the period, except on Saturdays, at 7:30. The Rev. Mr. Rice is professor of homiletics at Northwest Christian college at Eugene, and is declared to be one of the ablest preachers on the coast. His sermon Sunday morning, on the subject, "The Church and Tomorrow's World," will be supplemented by the anthem "Come Unto Me" by Coenen, and the solo by John Schmidt, "The Lord Is My Rock," by Wooler. Sunday evening the Rev. Mr. Rice will preach on "Christ, the Hope of Our Age" and at this service the special music will be an anthem by the youth choir, "In Heavenly Love Abiding" by Brown, and a duet "My Redeemer," sung by John Schmidt and Fred Bates.

Special music for the two-week period is being planned by John Schmidt, jr., director of music at the local church, and will include solos and choral groups from students at Northwest Christian college.

This evangelistic emphasis in preaching was preceded by a week of visitation in which laymen of the church participated, and which was directed by the ministers, the Rev. Dudley Strain and the Rev. Jesse M. Goodheart.
