Lectures to Feature Atom Medical Aids

Oregon medical men will have an opportunity to learn at first hand from a nationally recognized authority the medical aspects of atomic energy, the therapeutic use of radioactive isotopes and the medical effects of atomic energy explosions, at the seventh annual Summer Memorial lectures April 28 to 30 in Portland.

Dr. Schudis Warren, Harvard medical school pathologist and medical consultant to the U. S. atomic energy commission, is one of three guest lecturers appearing at the University of Oregon medical school for the 33rd annual meeting of the school's alumni association. The other Summer speakers are Dr. Herman E. Pearson, University of Rochester (New York) medical school, and Dr. John W. Scott, University of Alberta, Canada.

All physicians, surgeons and accredited medical students in good standing are invited to attend free of charge.

Fields for the Summer Memorial lectures for the advancement of medical science were provided from the estate of Dr. Ernst A. Sommer, 1890 graduate of the medical department of Willamette university. After extensive study in the east and Europe, Dr. Sommer practiced at Oregon cities, was elected mayor there, and then moved to Portland and served as member of the school board. A veteran of World War I, he was active until his death in 1936 in professional societies, schools, and hospitals in the Pacific coast.
