Don't Look Now...

but... those who heard Gladys Swarthout liked her, those who met her loved her. It seems, she liked Salem people, and said she wanted to be asked back. She would have liked to sign autographs, but upon hearing so many coughs (and there were many) she could not take the chance of getting a cold.

Important folks... Watch a man signing his name, and you see a man who's king for a brief moment. Now a woman takes the pen and simply writes her name—but not a man! He tries the pen on an edge of the paper, places it carefully in his hand, adjusts his arm to the correct position, flourishes a couple of circles in mid-air and then dashes off the signature suddenlike. And what results?—something no one can read anyway.

Simple explanation... Staying the night at the Astoria hotel last Saturday we found the answer to, what is a "semi-private bath?" It seems it is a room with partition only part way up, at least that was what our was. Chummy, to say the least.

Easy Way Out... We always have petticoat trouble, even with our long skirts, why not sew on a little lace and let'er show like the other young girls skirts do...

Two and two... I wonder if the case of the dunked boatman who asked the paper not to reveal his name because if his wife found out she'd "be awful sore," isn't like that of the 'teen ager who thinks his mother doesn't know he smokes. The wife might, just possibly guess that he fell into the water when she found his clothes soaked with water—but then, maybe she isn't curious. Maxine Buren
