No Flies Experts Tell About Best Ways to Use DDT to Rid House of Insects

By Maxine Buren Statesman Women's Editor

It's old fashioned to use cobwebs. Scientists, vague and impractical as they may seem sometimes, have done the housewife a good turn by producing fly sprays which really get rid of undesirable bugs about the house. DDT is the most modern spray.

Government experts come up with a bit of information which is very encouraging, and which we now pass on to you readers. Here is material from the bulletin:

After cleaning clothes closets this spring, apply a DDT spray to walls, woodwork, baseboards and shelves as a protection against clothes moths and carpet beetles for the warm weather season. An oil spray is best because it does not leave a white deposit as a water spray does. It should be a residual spray rather than one of the so-called aerosol bombs or space sprays if it is to be effective over the months in killing insects which come in contact with closet surfaces. Aerosol sprays kill flying insects or those which happen to be exposed at the time but they are without lasting effect because they leave little or no residue.

DDT solutions also may be sprayed lightly on wool clothes without injuring the fabric. Too much of the solution may show up in whitish traces on dark clothes but these can be removed by brushing or dry cleaning.

DDT spraying is useful for protecting clothes hanging in closets while the more familiar moth flakes or crystals are advised for clothes stored in tight bags, trunks or other containers where a fumigating effect is desired. Added protection may be given to stored clothes by spraying them and their container with DDT.

The entomologists point out that carpet beetle larvae are killed more slowly by DDT than are clothes moths and some other insects. They may not die until 10 days or two weeks after their first exposure to DDT but during this time they will stop their
