A Processional of Graduates....

June, always the commencement month, when graduates, college and high school form the processional in caps and gowns to receive their diplomas. It is a busy time for the young seniors with farewell banquets, proms and parties occupying much of their time after exams are tucked away . . . and finally paracalaureate and commencement, which they have diligently worked towards the past four years. It is indeed a proud moment for their parents to suddenly realize their sons or daughters are about to graduate and step out into the world to begin their professional or business careers. In most every case this year the graduating classes are largest in history of the school, which signifies the importance of education in one's future life. Today we have pictured the senior class officers, wearing traditional cap and gown, representing the three Salem schools, which hold commencement exercises in June. In the background are the school buildings, which have played an important role during the school days of the graduates.

Leaders of the Sacred Heart Academy senior class the past year have been, left to right, Robert Menke, vice-president; Kathleen Emmons, secretary; Rita Lancaster, president; George Hemann, treasurer; and Walter Davey, student body president. The officers, along with the other members of their class, which number 51, received their diplomas on June 1 at ceremonies at St. Joseph's hall. (Kennell-Ellis photo).
