

Roses Open for Week-End Show

The biggest rose show yet held in Salem is in prospect for this week-end and will open at the armory on Saturday at 2 o'clock and remain open until 9 p. m., reopening again Sunday morning at 10 and remaining open until 8 p. m. Because of the growth of the show in recent years, the place was moved from the YMCA, where it has been held, to the Salem armory. No one in Salem is more interested in roses or the Salem exhibit than is George Alling who is judging today at the Portland Rose show. Alling is pictured here inspecting his newer roses, including City of York and California. In search of buds that will have developed "just right" for the Salem show. Ollie Schendel will manage the exhibition. (Farm Photo for The Statesman.)

Summer Session At Monmouth to Open on June 14

MONMOUTH — OCE summer session opening Monday, June 14, will offer elementary education and lower division work. Although reservations for living accommodations indicate a large enrollment, housing facilities are adequate to take care of many more, officials state.
New offerings in the departments of Education, social studies, science, English, physical education, art and music will provide added attraction for students who have been on the campus previous summers.
A full program of courses required to meet teacher certification regulations will be provided for teachers now working on emergency certificates and a number of courses have been added to meet the needs of lower division and advanced students who wish to prepare for supervisory or administrative positions.
Summer session will be in two sections, first from June 14 to July 22; second, July 26 to August 27. Eighteen hours of credit may be earned by attending both sessions.
