After-Hours Harvest Work Encouraged

After-hours picking in Salem area cherry orchards is being encouraged by the Salem state employment service office to cope with a shortage of pickers.

William Baillie, office manager, said Wednesday that 500 pickers were needed as the hot weather quickly brings the fruit to the ripening stage.

City dwellers may drive out to nearby orchards in the Eola hills and other areas and pick several hours before dark, he said. His office has information available on the yards. Most of the orchards, he noted, are in good condition and the crop better than was previously expected.

Harvesting of cane berries, slated to start here next week, will require about 3,000 pickers in this area, he said. An employment branch will be opened at Stayton city hall on July 6 to aid in harvesting between 400 and 500 acres of cane berries in that area.

Bean picking in the Stayton district probably will begin about July 25. Already the Salem employment office has one order for 50 bean stringers. Camping facilities for both berry and bean pickers are available at almost all yards near Stayton it was reported.

Wrecking Old House on North Commercial

Now being wrecked to make room for a used car lot is this old Salem residence at 635 N. Commercial st. In what was once the city's finest residential area. The former William H. Byars home, it dates back nearly 80 years. (Photo by Don Dill, Statesman staff photographer).

Commercial Street Home Yields To Expanding Business Area

By Winston H. Taylor
 Staff Writer, The Statesman

One of the last houses in Salem's finest residential district of earlier days is yielding to wreckers this week, as the William H. Byars home at 635 N. Commercial st. is razed. The change is part of the gradual encroachment of business on the area during the past quarter century.

The home was the birthplace of a Salem woman, Mrs. Ronald Glover, now of 1720 S. Winter st. After she had lived there periodically for many years, the Glovers sold and moved a year ago to be away from the nearby railroad and increasing commercial activity.

Erected Near 1869
 With some belief that the house was erected in 1869, Mrs. Glover said that Mr. Byars, her father, purchased it in 1882 or 1883 from W. H. Odell, his partner in The Oregon Statesman. She was born there a few years later, and the house remained in the family until last year. Byars, who was state printer and later U. S. surveyor general for Oregon as well as being an early owner of the Capital Journal, died in 1922 and Mrs. Byars in 1929.

A fine home during the 19th century served often in the nature of a hotel, says Mrs. Glover. During the state legislature sessions and state fairs, many homes were opened to guests. The large house was otherwise a necessity for the Byars' nine children.

One of First Businesses
 One of the first businesses in the area, according to Mrs. Glover, was Lemon's market at Commercial and Union street, which replaced a house in the Lemon family. Later were added a bus garage and used car lots, such as the replacement on this site will be.

Among other early residences in the district, some of which still stand, were that of Dr. W. S. Mott, father of the late U. S. Rep. James W. Mott, the F. W. Stealoff home and one once the home of Daniel Fry, sr.

Nearly two million automatic gas water heaters were sold in this country in 1947.

PIONEER—Mr. and Mrs. John Calavan had as their guests overnight Friday Mr. and Mrs. Mac Calavan, Donald and Virgil of Toledo, and Mrs. Virgil Calavan of Portland. David and Virgil stayed with their grandparents a few days.

Paul Reiling, principal of Gervais Union High school, and two other faculty members, Orward Hove and David Cavett of Woodburn, are attending summer school at Willamette university.

The Westmont Ambassador male quartet of Westmont college, Santa Barbara, Calif., appeared at the local Presbyterian church Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Vigil are the parents of a son born June 18 at the Woodburn hospital.

The Reverend Martin Doherty suffered a dislocated elbow as the result of a fall in his home recently.

Better Water Supply Eyed For Silverton

SILVERTON, June 30—Close harmony between the Silverton planning commission and city council was urged by Mayor C. H. Dickerson, at his first official appearance before the commission Tuesday night.

Discussions centered around improvement of the water system. Latest difficulty is a shortage caused from two heavy industrial uses followed by a break in one of the water mains. Irrigation was stopped the first two days of the week and continued Wednesday on a ration basis.

Dr. P. A. Loar said engineering plans had been completed for a new dam and filtration plant prior to the war, and that three-fourths of the engineering costs, including all but construction supervision, already has been paid for. The commission went on record to recommend to the city council that its members consult with the Portland engineers to obtain estimates at present prices. Members informally expressed hope that the city might use the $44,000 now on hand in the water fund, and that the remainder needed might be met by bond issue in November.

Mayor Dickerson Wednesday ordered notices sent to council members for an informal meeting Thursday night with Carl Green of the John Cunningham engineers in Portland, who has drawn the earlier plans.

Closer supervision of the city park at night was also discussed. Lack of lights in the heavily wooded city park was decried but no funds are in the budget to provide for lights for the coming year. Efforts will be made to interest a local civic organization in raising the less than $300 needed to install proper lights in the park. City Manager Robert Borland expressed the belief that the council would consent to maintenance once lights are installed.
