Recreation abounds in Oregon...

In Oregon playtime is any time. Winter or summer, you can name your own sport or diversion. Sportsmen find here some of the finest fishing and hunting in the nation. Skiers find one of the longest ski seasons in the country on 11,245-foot Mt. Hood. Golfers play on their choice of many excellent courses throughout the state.

Yes, name your wish in the way of recreation and Oregon has it! Within the state there are 165 park areas and camps in 13 national forests. There are 125 celebrations in the form of festivals, pageants, rodeos, fairs and fishing derbies each year. There's sailing, riding and swimming, and if the sheer shock of nature's majesty is your desire, we've Crater Lake, and a Snake River canyon deeper than the Grand Canyon of the Colorado—not to mention other scenic wonders. Recreation abounds in Oregon!

AS THIS REGION GROWS, SO GROWS PGE

Much of Oregon's growth is due to the state's recreational advantages. Electricity is related to recreation because it makes life happier and more worth living. It assures more playing time for all of us. Expanding its service so that more people can lighten their work and have more time for fun, PGE has spent $12,500,000 since 1945 and is spending an additional $7,000,000 in the Willamette Valley this year.
