DRESS-UP DAY . . . on Wednesday for the women at the Salem Golf club . . . Every kind of a costume imaginable, providing many laughs . . . It's no wonder the scores were high that day as they played in costume, which must have been a struggle for many . . . Just before lunch and after the day's play the women paraded outside the club before the judges, Mrs. Arthur Rahn, Mrs. Roy H. Simmons and Mrs. Brazier Small.

were fooled by her disguise as a grandmother . . . perfect make-up with a set of upper dentures, grey hair and wearing an old-fashioned dress . . . Mrs. Ross Coppock took honors for the best sustained character . . . She was a Scotchman and even talked like one while playing golf . . . when coming in off the first nine a friend called out and asked if she wanted a sandwich . . . her reply was "is it for free" . . . She wore a plaid skirt, socks with garters, a tam o'shanter . . . even a pipe and red eyebrows . . . Prize to the funniest costume went to

"It is to laugh" said Sam Giraffe . . . talking to his cousin zebra . . . "Yes for those such as you did things . . . they're none of my affair" . . . But for you and me . . . Down where we see . . . the uncertain face of life . . . There's protection and insurance in B.M.A.'s complete insurance . . . for Accident, Health and Life

Mrs. Sephus Starr, who wore a red wig and a hat with purple, green and yellow plumes, lots of make-up . . . a very short blue lace dress over a lavender petticoat and white men's shoes on the wrong feet . . . and the most original costume was worn by Mrs. John R. Wood . . . She depicted Oregon's changeable weather . . . dressed on one side with rain jacket and hat, long underwear, and a boot . . . and on the other side as summer with sun hat, bra, shorts and a sport shoe . . .

NUPTIAL NOTES . . . Outstandingly beautiful was the wedding of Rosemary Gaiser and Richard Maxfield on Tuesday night at the First Presbyterian church . . . All white flowers at the church . . . the many white candles casting a soft glow in the white edifice and just at dusk with just a little light coming through the stained glass windows . . . Here they came! . . . many ohs and ahs for the bridesmaids, so attractive and quaint in their bustle dresses of blue frosted organdy with hoop skirts and matching bonnet hats . . . Janet Gaiser, the bride's younger sister, enjoying every minute and just about bursting with joy . . . The tall, brunette bride, stately in her satin gown . . . the full hooped over skirt caught at intervals with fresh stephanotis and smilax . . . Lovely music and unusual selection of pieces (the bride's favorites) and sung by an old school friend, Mrs. Robert Dawes (Jean Sechrist) formerly of Salem, who is now living in Los Angeles while her husband is attending college . . . It was a busy evening for Jean, who also was a bridesmaid . . . the other girls helping her put on her bonnet and getting her flowers and mits after singing . . . Immediately after the receptional Jean sang "Where Ever You Walk" . . . so enjoyable instead of immediately leaving the church . . . Tom Brand, the head usher, taking his duties so seriously . . . Incidentally, his first wedding in which to participate . . . Mrs. Robert Newton of Claremont, Calif., one of the bridesmaids, was a bride herself in June and Rosemary was one of her attendants . . . The reception . . . the lovely garden at the Gaiser home the setting . . . the floral beds so colorful with petunias, phlox and Easter lilies . . . The bridal party a picture receiving before one of the floral settings on a white carpet . . . The bride's tables arranged on the cement terrace with blue place . . . here gorgeous begonias in hanging baskets . . . The tiered cake on a round table . . . and the ice cream punch and coffee at a long table . . . a white point d'esprit ruffled cloth over pale pink satin . . . caught up at the corners with clusters of pastel flowers . . . and old-fashioned centerpiece of phlox, petunias and Queen Anne's lace combined with pink ribbon and flanked by hurricane lamps . . . Later in the evening the bride and groom and their attendants eating wedding cake . . . and just before changing to her going away outfit Rosemary threw her bouquet in the garden to Alice Rose, who will be married in just two weeks . . . Rosemary and Dick dashing off in their new car, a wedding gift from his parents . . . Sentimental note . . . part of their honeymoon to be spent at Rosemary Inn in northern Washington on Lake Crescent on the Olympic peninsula.

TEA TIME . . . on Friday when Mrs. Farley Mogan entertained for her house guest, Mrs. Harrison G. Williams of San Francisco . . . The setting, the attractive new home of the Mogans on Fair Oaks Way in Kingwood Heights . . . spacious rooms and knotty pine den colorful with the many souvenirs the Mogans brought from Germany . . . above the mantle a large painting of Farley in uniform, which had been

Wedding in Dallas Read July 27

MONMOUTH — Miss Bonnie Baker, daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. Willis Baker, Independence, became the bride of James L. Leddy, son of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Leddy, Monmouth, Tuesday night, July 27, in the Assembly of God church, Independence. The Rev. Baker read the service.

Lighting the tapers were the Misses Patricia and Shirley Kight, Monmouth; and Shirley Kight sang "I Love You Truly". Mrs. John Hodges, West Salem, played the wedding music.

The bride, given in marriage by her mother, wore white satin, made en train, with sweetheart neckline, and buttoned in back. Her fingertip veil was arranged in a crown headdress and she carried a white gladiol nosegay. Mrs. Alice Baker, the bride's sister-in-law, was matron of honor, wearing pink, with a pastel nosegay. Bridesmaids were Mrs. Lawrence Edwards, Dallas, and Mrs. Dean Rardin, Monmouth.

Willis Baker, jr., the bride's brother, was best man. Ushers were Lawrence Edwards and Dean Rardin. Barbara Ann Kraeger, Independence, was flower girl. Walter Smith, jr., was ring bearer. A reception followed in the social rooms of the Presbyterian church. Assisting were Mrs. John Hodges, Patricia Kight and Grace Schroeder, Shirley Kight, Leonard and Leville Cook, Independence.

After a trip to Canada, the couple will reside in Springfield, Mo., where Mr. Leddy will continue in college.

The monthly meeting of the Salem Memorial hospital auxiliary will be held Monday afternoon in the chapel at 1:30 o'clock. Final arrangements will be made for the rummage to be held August 27 and 28.
