Work Starts on Horse Center With Ceremony

Work on the Willamette valley horsemen's center on the South River road was officially started Saturday in special ground breaking ceremonies.

Douglas McKay, state senator and republican candidate for governor, dug the first spadeful of dirt at the dedication. McKay is a longtime member of both the Oregon mounted posse and Salem Saddle club.

The 34-acre site will eventually provide complete facilities for horsemen of this area. Scheduled for completion during the summer building program are the rodeo grounds, grandstand, quarter-mile track, bucking and roping chutes and holding pens.

The project was organized recently by the Willamette Valley Horsemen's association, which represents the posse, Saddle club and other Salem area horsemen.
